AUBURN PREXY WILL BE TRIED ON FEBRUARY 11

Charges of Incompetency and Inefficiency Preferred by Alumni Will Be Heard by Board.

CHARGES CONTAIN 7 SPECIFIC COUNTS

Birmingham and Montgomery Alumni Assert Institution Has Lagged Under Dr. Dowell.

Montgomery, Ala., January 12.—The board of trustees of Alabama Polytechnic institute, which met at the office of Governor Brandon this afternoon to hear charges of incompetency and inefficiency against Dr. Speight Dowell, president of the college, preferred by alumni of Birmingham and Montgomery, adjourned late today to meet at the office of the governor on February 11.

The adjournment was taken after passage of resolutions, requiring that counsel for the alumni state and specify in writing the complaints and charges which the alumni desired to make, and stating that the board would receive and carefully weigh and consider all evidence in support of these charges which the alumni might wish to offer. It was at first proposed that the trustees meet again in two weeks, but an extension of time in which to secure written affidavits was granted upon request of counsel for the alumni.

Seven Counts In Charges.

The charges preferred by the Birmingham alumni, as stated by Joel E. Webb, of Birmingham, counsel for the alumni, contained seven specific counts and concluded with an appeal to the board to "come to the rescue of the situation at Auburn and to avoid another single step backward." The charges were as follows:

1: That Dr. Dowell had no previous experience as a college executive and that the alumni feel his trial has been unsuccessful.

2: That he has been unable to win and maintain the respect and affection of the student body.

3: That he has been unable to inspire and maintain the faith of members of the faculty.

4: That he has been unable to solidify and use the support of the alumni.

Enrollment Has Lagged.

5: That the college has not kept pace in enrollment with other state institutions (statistics submitted to show this).

6: That lack of leadership, which is responsible for the failure to have a normal increase in attendance of the student body, is also responsible for the neglected state of the buildings and campus.

7: That the present management has shown no inclination to compete with sister institutions of a similar kind in neighboring states, and that branches of work which should be considered among fundamental and main objectives are neglected and overlooked.

It was stated that a letter from Dr. B. A. Wooten, former professor of physics at Auburn and now dean of Washington and Lee university, would be submitted in support of the claim that Dr. Dowell did not maintain the faith of the faculty.

This letter, it was said, would go to show that Auburn "is in the class of a country school and that office clerks impose upon members of the faculty petty, irritating tyrannies;

HALE WILL HEAD ATLANTA PRISONS

Succeeds T. B. Lanford, Who Had Held Position of Superintendent for Last Fifteen Years.

E. J. Hale, an employee of the city tax collector's office, Monday was elected superintendent of Atlanta prisons by the prison committee of city council. He will take charge February 1.

Hale will replace T. B. Lanford, who had held the position for more than 15 years. No reason for the change was given by any members of the committee, and it was stated after the meeting that Hale's name was the only one placed in nomination, although a letter from Lanford was read requesting that he be renominated.

Hale, before becoming connected with the tax collector's office, served for several years as bookkeeper of the prison department, and now will assume the double duties of bookkeeper and superintendent.

The meeting was the first held by the 1925 prisons committee of uocn cil, of which Councilman Charles I. Chosewood, of the Third ward, is choirman.

Alex W. Smith, Sr., Dies of Apoplexy At Hughes Banquet

HAD BRILLIANT CAREER IN LEGAL PROFESSION

After World War He Was Retained by Government as Special Counsel to Railroad Administration.

Alexander W. Smith, Sr., a leader of the Atlanta bar and widely known throughout the United States, died almost instantly at 7:15 o'clock Monday night when he was stricken with apoplexy just as he was preparing to enter the banquet hall at the Piedmont Driving club to attend the banquet in honor of Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes and members of the executive council of the American Bar association.

A pall was thrown over the brilliant assemblage of guests composed of some of the nation's leading lawyers, distinguished guests and prominent Atlantans, who were chatting in the reception room of the Driving

Mr. Smith fell to the floor. He was carried into an adjoining room where a physician pronounced him dead as a result of an apoplectic stroke. Mr. Smith was stricken just as Secretary Hughes had walked into the room and the guests were preparing to enter the banquet hall.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Barclay & Brandon, funeral directors, in charge.

Apparently in Good Health.

Mr. Smith's death came as a distinct shock to his relatives and friends as he had apparently been in perfect health up to the minute of his death.

In addition to his widow, Mr. Smith is survived by three sons, Alex W. Smith, Jr., Theodore Hammond Smith and Clarke Kendrick Smith, all of Atlanta; one daughter, Mrs. Edward M. Brown, of New York city, and one brother, Victor Lamar Smith, of Atlanta.

The life and career of Mr. Smith is one of brilliance and success from the day he was admitted to the Georgia bar in 1883. Born June 24, 1861, in Habersham county, the son of Henry Lamar and Sarah Amelia Wyly Smith, he was educated at the University of Georgia, leaving that institution in 1878 at the conclusion of his junior year. He came to Atlanta as a young man and entered business here. On September 10, 1885 he was married to Miss Ida

U. S. WILL RECEIVE $25,000,000 SUM YEARLY ON CLAIMS

Reimbursement of United States for War Damages and Occupation Costs To Be Made in 25 Years.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paris, January 12.—The British and American delegation at the conference of the allied finance ministers have reached a final and definite accord relative to the payment to the United States of the costs of the army of occupation and war damage claims. This was officially announced tonight.

The agreement is subject to ratification by a plenary session of the conference, but inasmuch as France, Italy and Belgium entered the negotiations already pledged to support the American viewpoint and divergencies existed only between the British and Americans, ratification is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

$25,000,000 Paid Annually.

The United States, under the terms of the agreement, will receive about $25,000,000 yearly on the total of her claims, amounting to approximately $600,000,000. Thus reimbursement of the United States will occupy a period of 25 years.

The sum remaining due for the costs of the American occupation is fixed at between $250,000,000 and $260,000,000, while the amount of war damage claims, the conference has agreed, will be based on the findings of the mixed claims commission. This has been tentatively fixed at $350,000,000.

The terms of the agreement provide:

First, the payment to the United States of 55,000,000 gold marks yearly by priority on the cash payments under the Dawes plan, to apply on the American army of occupation costs. These payments are to begin September 1, 1926, or after the extinguishment of Belgium's priority payments. If the Dawes plan functions normally, that part of the United States claims will be written off the reparations book in 1943 or 1944.

Share in Dawes Annuities.

Second, the United States will share in the Dawes annuities at the rate of 2 1-4 per cent, the total payments not to exceed 45,000,000 gold marks, beginning retroactively September 1, 1924. These payments will be used to amortize the amount of the war damage claims as fixed by the mixed claims commission. The American representatives have agreed that this latter amount should not exceed $350,000,000, or with interest, roughly, 1,500,000,000 gold marks. Repayments under this head would normally take over 30 years, but it is expected that the heavier payments made in the later years of the operation of the Dawes plan will cancel the claim in about 25 years.

Third, the United States obtains the immediate release and possession, upon ratification of the protocol, of $15,000,000 now in the federal reserve bank, which was deposited there by the allies under the Wadsworth agreement.

These are the broad outlines of the agreement reached late tonight between Ambassadors Kellogg and Herrick and James A. Logan, on the one side, and Winston Churchill and Sir Otto Niemeyer on the other, much to the surprise of the continental delega-

Metal Polish Put in Punch At Marriage

Two of Guests at Wedding Feast Dead, Three More Critically Ill.

Pottsville, Pa., January 12.—Two men died, three others were made critically ill and numerous members of a wedding party at Gilberton, near here, were being treated tonight as a result of what is reported by police and physicians to have been either a wholesale poisoning plan or an ill-timed joke. The names of the victims were not given out.

According to reports, someone put metal polish in the punch bowl at the wedding feast. First reports were that poison alcohol was responsible, but a physician who treated the victims stated that it was a powerful poison that had none of the characteristics of alcoholic poisoning.

Six persons are known to have partaken of the liquid, but as members of the party were taken to homes and surrounding towns by friends, the exact number of victims was not known tonight.

WOMAN'S CLUB BACKS BATTLE AGAINST PISTOL

SUPPORT IS PROMISED BY LEADING CITIZENS

Campaign Continues to Receive Commendations of Individuals and of Organizations.

With numerous organizations throughout the city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia roundly supporting The Constitution's campaign to outlaw the concealed pistol, the Atlanta Woman's club Monday night took a decided stand against the hidden deadly weapon and announced its intention of backing up The Constitution's fight on itinerant firearms to a finish.

The club passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the Atlanta Woman's club heartily indorses legislation for the restriction of the sale of pistols, as suggested by the campaign of The Atlanta Constitution."

The resolution was signed by Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president, and by Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club.

Congratulates Constitution.

Later Monday night Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith gave out a statement in which she congratulated The Constitution on its fearless stand against the pistol.

"This is the noblest and most worthy movement Atlanta has taken up for a long time," Mrs. Smith said. "I, personally, and the club, collectively, are strongly back of The Constitution's fight and we will do our part. We are in favor of taking pistols away from everyone in the state of Georgia with the exception of law-enforcement officers. There is no occasion for any lay citizen to carry a pistol of any kind, at any time. The Constitution is doing wonderful work and we are certain it will be rewarded with legislation outlawing the pistol."

Monday's Developments.

Letters and expressions of approval for The Constitution's campaign against the pistol continued to come with every mail. The developments of Monday were as follows:

1. A letter from the Kiwanis club, of Hartwell, Ga., announcing that a resolution had been passed by that body as follows: "Resolved, that the Kiwanis club, of Hartwell, Ga., hereby puts itself on record as favoring the movement now on foot to outlaw the pistol in this state and that The Atlanta Constitution be furnished with a copy of this resolution."

Hearing Next Thursday.

2. The ordinance offered by Councilman John A. White of the Fourth ward, designed to limit the sale of

MYSTERY IS SEEN IN SUICIDE CASE

Investigators Believe Victim of Hotel Killing Gave False Name To Protect His Family.

While police Monday night communicated with St. Louis authorities to establish the identity of "C. J. Lind," registered from the Missouri city, who killed himself at a downtown hotel, other investigators began working on the theory that the suicide had registered under an assumed name.

This theory was advanced when a letter, addressed to Coroner Paul Donehoo, was found on the person of "Lind," who had slashed his throat with a razor. Detectives declared that it showed too great a familiarity with local affairs to have been written by a stranger, and they believe that the victim was a local man, who had made an attempt to conceal his identity, probably for the protection of his family.

All other means of identification, with exception of an unmarked note book bearing the name "C. J. Lind," had been removed from the room. According to the hotel clerk "Lind" had registered there six days ago and had received no phone calls nor letters.

The letter, addressed to the coroner, asked that all expenses incurred be defrayed by "the sum of $109 you will find in my purse." Only $106.83, however, was found in the pocketbook. The hotel bill of $18 was paid. The money was taken in charge by Mr. Donehoo.

The body, with the throat slashed from ear to ear, was found in a pool of blood on the bed by the day house detective after attempts to enter the room by the maid and housekeeper had proven in vain, the detective entering the room after climbing out on the building and entering the window. The manager of the hotel was summoned upon the find, and an ambulance called. "Lind," however, was dead when the doctors arrived. The body is being held at H. M. Patterson & Son's, awaiting communication and location of family.

QUEEN OF ENGLAND BECOMES ADDICTED TO X-WORD PUZZLE

London, January 12. — Victoria Mary, queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, of the British territory beyond the seas, and Empress of India, has become a cross-word puzzle addict.

King George and Queen Mary are at Sandringham, the country place of Queen Alexandra, and her majesty is taking all the newspapers so that she won't miss a puzzle.

That cross-word puzzling in England is a hobby worthy of royalties' time is indicated by the announcement Monday, that a London newspaper would begin a $25,000 cross-word contest.

17 Starving Sailors Saved From Derelict Bone Ship

CAPTAIN TRIED THREE TIMES TO COMMIT SUICIDE

New York, January 12.—Seventeen half-starved men made port today with a story of hardships such as few sailormen live to tell. They were the captain and crew of the Portuguese windjammer Manuel Caragol, which went down with a hold full of bones last Saturday morning after 80 days of battle against gales that beset her from the time she left Rio de Janeiro until the battered hulk was sighted by the shipping board freighter Kenowis.

Her master, Joseph Mogano, was taken off the Kenowis on a stretcher. In agony with three broken ribs suffered when he rescued a seaman from being washed overboard, Mogano three times tried to kill himself in his cabin, but members of the crew saved him each time. His last attempt was when his crew was removed from the Caragol to the Kenowis. Instructed to burn his ship because she was a menace to navigation, the master sought to make the four-master his funeral pyre, but was forcibly removed.

The Caragol left Rio de Janeiro October 18 for Philadelphia with a cargo of bones to be used for fertilizer. Within 24 hours she ran into a succession of squalls which increased in fury as she bravely continued on her way. Her plight grew worse and worse, the storms opening up seams in her, through which the waters poured. The crew threw loose cement into the hold, but succeeded only in clogging the pumps. A few days before Christmas, a gale stripped every shred of sail from her four masts and the Caragol drifted. On December 26, the coal gave out and the men burned parts of the deck. On New Year's day, each man was rationed to one sea biscuit a day. On January 7, the lookout saw the smoke of a ship on the horizon. The men went on their knees and prayed. The steamer sailed on.

For three more days and nights, the Caragol drifted helplessly. Once the Gulf Stream carried her to within 50 miles of New York. But another gale whipped out of the north Atlantic and tossed her back to a point 190 miles southeast of the Nantucket light, where the lookout of the Kenowis, herself blown 700 miles off her course by a gale, made out her distress lights through a driving rain.

FIGHT FOR SCHOOL LEADERSHIP SEEN

Friends of W. W. Gaines May Nominate Him for President of Board Against Hancock.

Unexpected opposition to John T. Hancock, candidate for reelection as president of the Atlanta board of education in the election to be held this afternoon, was reported Monday, when it was reported that W. W. Gaines, who served as president for several years, would be nominated at the annual meeting today.

Mr. Gaines, while denying that he would be a candidate, stated that he would accept the position if elected. Mr. Hancock has taken the same attitude and declares that he is not seeking the place, but will serve if renamed by the board.

If both men are nominated a spirited fight is expected as both have large followings among board members. Mr. Hancock was president during 1924, while Mr. Gaines headed the board for several years previous to that time. He did not offer for reelection last year and Mr. Hancock was elected without opposition.

No Other Opposition.

W. C. Slate, first vice president, and Dr. R. M. Eubanks, second vice president, are expected to be renamed without opposition.

Election of Mr. Slate as vice president, however, probably will mean that he will not be chairman of the purchasing committee, considered the most important committee of the board. According to a policy to be put into effect this year officers will

Constitution Is Swamped By "Twin-Matching" Mail

:: STAGGERING NUMBER OF ANSWERS RECEIVED ::

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

New traffic jams, closing of the postoffice, suspension of The Constitution and frantic pleas for rescue from suffocation—all three possibilities have been averted with the closing at midnight last Saturday of The Constitution's twin-matching contest.

Throughout Sunday and Monday, however, scores of huge mail sacks continued their steady stream into The Constitution building.

The gravure office, the reporters' rooms, the want ad section, the cashier's desks, the artists' studio, the society reporters' salon and the editor's sacred sanctum are deluged with packages, boxes, packets, cartons, tow sacks, meal bags, tin cans, compacts, old socks, tire casings, scrap books, writing tablets, wall paper, linoleum carpets, oil cloths, safety deposit boxes, old valises, millinery boxes, green hides, carpet bags, oil cans, lace curtains and every other conceivable kind of a container and material for containers—each and all and every one of them bringing in sets of twins matched by the sender as per instructions in the contest.

Everybody Busy.

To look at this deluge of mail swamping all of the six floors of The Constitution building it appears that nearly everybody in America must have been busy in this contest during the nine weeks it has run. Packages arrived from all parts of America and probably from Europe, Yrope, Orope and Syrup as the light comedian used to say. They're bound to have come—some of them—from outside America as there are not enough people on this continent to send in this staggering number of replies judging from the looks of the mountains of mail piled high around this part of Atlanta.

The twin matching contest closed at midnight last Saturday and the poor misguided conductor of that contest in the Rotogravure section had

CUTS IN BUDGETS OF DEPARTMENTS OF CITY PLANNED

Finance Board Will Turn Down Practically All Requests Made for Special Appropriations.

With 1925 budgets from only 10 departments of city government, and only a small number of expected requests for appropriations by the general public, presented to the finance board of city council Monday, indications are that a total of between 20 and 25 million dollars will be asked this year.

Practically all appropriations requested by the public will be refused, it was stated Monday afternoon by Alderman W. B. Duvall, chairman of the finance committee, and requests of almost every department will be slashed. However, a liberal attitude will be taken regarding schools, and, according to a tentative apportionment mapped out by the committee in executive session Monday morning, the school department will be given almost $3,000,000 this year.

Extra Sums for Schools.

In addition to the regular 26 per cent of the city's total revenues, the committee decided to give the school department $451,000, $350,000 of which is to be used in repaying a loan from members of the Atlanta Clearing House banks to meet payrolls last year, and $101,000 to be used as payments for free textbooks purchased last September.

No other appropriation will be decided on until after all department heads have been heard, and all requests from the public received, it was stated Monday. The committee is slated to meet at 10 o'clock this morning, and will start its afternoon

ATLANTA HONORS BOY SCOUTS TODAY

City Joins in Parade and Exercises in Observance of Scout 'Appreciation' Day.

Today is "Boy Scout Appreciation Day" in Atlanta, it being designated in a proclamation issued last Thursday by Mayor Walter A. Sims.

Several Georgia Scout leaders have arrived to attend the annual conclave of the Georgia district of region six, Boy Scouts of America, which will open this morning at 9 o'clock at the Biltmore hotel with Mell Wilkinson presiding and Chief Scout Executive James E. West, of American Boy Scouts as the chief speaker.

Chief Executive West was to arrive at the Terminal station at 5 o'clock this morning from Charlotte, N. C., where the annual meeting of the North and South Carolina district was held Monday. He is accompanied by Ray O. Wyland, director of education for the Boy Scouts, and H. O. Hunter, regional scout executive of region six.

Tom Law, chairman of the arrangement committee for this meeting, Monday announced an invitation has been extended by Mell Wilkinson, member of the national board of directors of American Boy Scouts, to Charles Evans Hughes, president of the Bar Association of America, who

GREAT BOULEVARD PLANNED IN HONOR OF 82ND DIVISION

Names of Courtland, Juniper and Washington Streets Will Be Changed to "82nd Boulevard."

Atlanta is to pay a fitting tribute to the All-American, 82nd division. Before next Armistice Day, unless something unforeseen occurs, this city will have a beautiful boulevard memorial to the boys of the 82nd who made the supreme sacrifice.

It will be a boulevard link connecting the south end of Atlanta, with Piedmont Park, on the extreme north. Washington, Courtland and Juniper streets to become the "82nd boulevard."

Mayor Walter Sims and the city planning commission late Monday gave their unanimous approval to the memorial. George L. Harrison, a former captain of the 327th infantry of the 82nd division, appeared before mayor and commission and was told to go ahead with plans for the memorial with all speed possible.

Will Make Final Plans.

An important meeting of members of the 82nd division will be held at 6:30 o'clock next Thursday night, at the Kimball house and all members interested in the boulevard memorial plan are requested to be present. Final and concrete plans for the commencement of work on the boulevard will be promulgated at this meeting.

Members of the 82nd division at a recent meeting formed a memorial committee, electing Col. H. S. Wagner as chairman. Col Wagner then wrote to the city planning commission stating that Atlanta had no memorial to the 82nd, or All-American division, and suggesting that the city name a boulevard for the division.

Colonel Wagner was called away from the city and turned the matter over to Mr. Harrison, who Monday received full approval of the city of Atlanta and instructions to "go ahead fast."

Enthusiastic Over Movement.

Mr. Harrison told a reporter for The Constitution that he found great enthusiasm among members of the commission and the mayor. The planning board adopted a resolution recommending the names of Washington, Courtland and Juniper streets be changed to "82nd Boulevard."

These three streets, connected, extend from Ridge avenue, on the extreme south, through to Piedmont park, forming a north-to-south boulevard link. The contemplated memorial boulevard runs into Piedmont park, where the Peace monument now stands, and where a fitting shaft is to be erected as soon as possible in memory of the

POLICE ASKS AID IN FINDING OWNER OF VICIOUS DOG

Police continued search Monday for a vicious dog which ran amuck Sunday night in the neighborhood of West Peachtree at Twelfth street, attacking a number of persons, including Alvin Cates, Jr., 624 West Peachtree, who was severely bitten.

Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett Monday night asked cooperation of persons who were attacked in establishing ownership of the dog, indicating that the owner either would be required to kill the canine or to keep it confined.

From reports to police of the actions of the dog it is believed that it was mad, and persons whom the canine bit during its frenzy, are urged to apply for Pasteur treatment.

The condition of little Alvin, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cates, who was more seriously injured than any other attacked by the dog, was reported Monday night as improving under treatment.

LEADERS OF BAR ATTEND BANQUET AT DRIVING CLUB

JUSTICE LAMAR PAID TRIBUTE BY SPEAKER

'There Is Too Much Government at Washington, Too Little at State Capitals,' Says Senator Long.

In a plea for perpetuation of the high ideals of the American Bar association and for enlistment of all forces in creation of a law-abiding public sentiment throughout the nation Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes Monday night delivered the principal address at a banquet given in his honor at the Piedmont Driving club by the Atlanta Bar association. Secretary Hughes announced at the outset that his speech was informal and that he chose to refrain from discussing great world problems, preferring for the moment to enjoy what he termed "the very gladsome fraternity of choice spirits of the bars."

Grover Middlebrooks, president of the Atlanta Bar association, introduced Secretary Hughes and after the Hughes speech, Judge Peter Meldrim, of Savannah, was introduced as toastmaster. Judge Meldrim called on several prominent members of the association for speeches, including Judge Richard B. Russell, chief justice of the Georgia supreme court, United States Senator Chester I. Long, of Kansas, Judge Nash Broyles, of the Georgia court of appeals, and others.

State Rights Discussed.

The only reference to problems faced by the nation by any of the speakers was made by Senator Long who declared that restoration of more government to the states is one big question that looms ahead of the people of this country.

"Speaking for myself and not for the bar association I want to say that there is too much government at Washington and too little government in the capitals of the 48 states," he said. "We must change this situation or soon we will have a national government at Washington with 48 provinces."

Upwards of 300 guests attended the banquet including members of the Georgia supreme court, court of appeals, judges of the superior courts and prominent lawyers from all parts of Georgia. Many of the visitors were accompanied by their wives and the affair partook of the nature of a brilliant social function. At the speakers' table were Secretary Hughes, Mr. Middlebrooks, Judge Meldrim, Senator Long, Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, former Governor Charles S. Whitman, of New York, Federal Judge Samuel Sibley, Mayor Walter A. Sims, Jesse A. Miller,

Banking System of Nation Is Remodeled Completely By McFadden's Proposed Law

Passage in House Today Predicted by Safe Majority, But Sledding in Senate Will Be Harder.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, January 12.—Complete remodeling of the banking system of the country both national and state, which will affect the largest city bank as well as the smallest country bank, is the issue at stake in the McFadden branch banking bill which will meet its first test Tuesday, when the house is scheduled to vote upon it, after several days of vigorous debate.

The heart of the bill is the extension to national banks of the right to establish branches in states where state banks are allowed branches, in itself a revolutionary change, in a way putting the national banks in a sort of chain store business. Besides this provision, the bill would provide for many other far-reaching changes, and constitutes the first attempt at real renovation of the national banking system since 1864.

Passage Is Indicated.

Indications are that the bill, an administration measure, will pass the house by a safe majority. There is some doubt of its success in the senate, because of protests which have poured in, especially from small banks in the south. Because of this opposition, the senate will insist on detailed consideration, and the bill may be "talked to death," if not actually defeated.

The real purpose of the measure is to bolster up and save the federal reserve system, according to the view of the treasury, as presented by the then comptroller of the currency, Henry B. Dawes, before the measure was taken up by the house.

Because of greater privileges allowed state banks, national banks are finding themselves unable to compete with state institutions, and are "slipping," he says, which in turn is affecting the federal reserve system.

"The national banking system will go out of existence if the remedial features provided in this bill, aside from branch banking, are not enacted into law," he said.

Big Bank Almost Withdraws.

One of the largest national banks in the south, with $60,000,000 deposits, nearly withdrew from the system recently, Dawes said, and was only persuaded to remain because of the hope held out for legislative relief.

While extending the right to national banks to establish branches, the bill also provides that no branch shall be established except in a city where there is a parent bank. This would put a restriction on state banks, which now can establish branches in other cities. State banks object to this limitation. Dawes gave his opinion of why this restriction is necessary.

Little Banks Wiped Out.

"We have a situation in some states where little banks are being wiped out and the unit banks disappearing," he said. "You will find some cities where there are nothing but the branch banks of the big institutions, where if a man wants to borrow money he cannot go down to his old friend who knows him well and regards him favorably.

"He has got to go to the manager of the branch bank, who has about the same flexibility in meeting local conditions that the railroad agents have had."

There are 18 states which do not allow branch banking in any form, and these are fighting the McFadden bill. The measure allows only one branch in cities with population of 25,000 to 50,000 and only two in cities between 50,000 and 100,000, with establishment of additional branches in larger cities, dependent upon approval by the comptroller of the currency.

that when he left Auburn, there were more people watching the teachers than there were teachers; that Dr. Dowell lacked scholarly dignity and attainments, perspective and vision."

Ask Relief of Services.

The charges of the Montgomery alumni, which were essentially the same as those preferred by the Birmingham body, contained an appeal that the institution be relieved of his services.

Every member of the board of trustees was present at the meeting today. Immediately after the session opened, Governor Brandon read a letter from Victor Hanson, publisher of the Birmingham News, in which Mr. Hanson said that it had been called to his attention that his sitting with the board of trustees, of which he is a member, would be protested on the grounds that he was biased as evidenced by an editorial appearing in his publication. The board of trustees passed a resolution not only requesting that Mr. Hanson sit with the board, but requiring him to do so.

Affidavits to support the charges of the alumni will be taken in the 30 days before the board reconvenes and will be submitted at the hearing in written form. Copies of all charges and affidavits must be furnished to Dr. Dowell, under a resolution passed by the board, while he will likewise be required to furnish the alumni with his defense.

Dowell's Friends Not Present.

Supporters and friends of Dr. Dowell did not appear at the hearing before the board this afternoon. Dr. Dowell is expected to file a written answer to the charges entered against him, which will be submitted to the board at its next meeting.

A group composed of members of the college faculty has prepared and circulated throughout the state a pamphlet concerning the development of Auburn during Dr. Dowell's administration. This pamphlet shows that the estimated value of new buildings during his administration amounted to $770,500, while in 1922 Auburn was admitted to membership in the Southern Association of Colleges, enabling students to enter any standard college or university for graduate work.

The pamphlet further shows that Auburn in 1924 for the fourth consecutive time was selected as "a distinguished college" by the United States war department and in 1921 designated by the Carnegie corporation as one of the eight outstanding engineering colleges of the United States.

Faculty Prepared Pamphlet.

This pamphlet was prepared and financed by a group of faculty members who did it, "that the public may have the concrete facts concerning the development of Auburn during Dr. Dowell's administration."

A voluminous statement detailing the development and activities of the college during his administration has been sent to the board of trustees by Dr. Dowell himself.

Dr. Dowell has also been given a vote of confidence by the students of the institution, alumni in several cities and various civic clubs over the state.

U. S. TO GET $25,000,000 YEARLY ON CLAIM

tions because of the speed with which a situation that to them seemed a hopeless deadlock the past three days has been cleared up.

The status of the German sequestrated property in the United States, including German tonnage, has not been officialy discussed during the negotiations, but there appears to be a tacit understanding on the part of the United States delegation that they be held as security for the American claim, or that the amount of their value shall be deducted from the capital claims should they be definitely appropriated.

Approval by both the Washington and London governments of this agreement has been received by Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Churchill, and the drafting committee is now engaged in putting it into a comprehensive and succinct resolution and, together with the solutions of other questions, it will be placed before the plenary session of the conference, which still remains tentatively fixed for tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock.

TWIN-MATCHING MAIL SWAMPS CONSTITUTION

hoped to announce the winners next Sunday but he took one look at the pile of mail and fainted. Recovering, he said he would engage a couple of armies of checkers and enlist all the troops at Fort McPherson and see if he couldn't get some angle on the outcome within a few weeks, possibly Sunday after next.

The advance guard of the checkers, some half a score in number, with the aid of hoisting apparatus and wrecking machinery, began collecting the avalanche of packages from the various departments, and to date these excavators have delved down far enough into the pile to allow the reporters to find their typewriters and to provide room for the wheels of the press to turn.

The twin matchers sent their solutions in by mail, in automobiles, on bicycles, ox-carts, one-horse wagons, wheelbarrows, tricycles, go-carts, goat wagons, motor trucks, airplanes, scooters, roller skates, baby carriages, velocipedes, racing sulkies, landaus, carry-us-alls, dirigible balloons, coaches-and-fours, one-hoss shays, farm tractors, steam rollers, dinky engines, circus chariots, mule carts and every other known mode of transportation.

Many Cities Represented.

Postmarks on the packages show that the twin matchers sent in replies from Social Circle and Seattle, from Skagway and Wayback, from New Jerusalem, Ohio and Old Point Comfort, Va.; from Long Branch, New Jersey and Short Creek, Ala.; from East Point, Ga., and West Point, N. Y.; from 17 and separate Washingtons, beginning with Washington, Ga., and ending with Washington, D. C.; from dozens of Jeffersons, Jacksons, Lincolns and Madisons; from Hollywood, the wicked, and Westerville, Ohio, the pious.

Some of the contestants accompanied their sets of twins with verses. Some sent elaborately illustrated portfolios. Some used blank verse while others used scriptural references to embellish solutions submitted. One contestant sent in a handsomely bound volume with a poem under each set of twins dedicated to that particular set. While all of this embellishment was gratuitous and not required in the contest it added a spicy zest to the work of the judges in picking the winners.

The twin matching contest was tried for the first time by The Constitution and it demonstrated that this newspaper and its gravure pictorial section both are read closely by readers in every section of the United States. The oceans of mail representing every state in the union and in the southeastern part of the country representing every county in the state.

Appeals to Everybody.

The game of matching the twins possessed an appeal that struck home immediately after the contest was launched. Interest in the contest was sustained through nine weeks and replies were coming in faster on the closing date than at any other time. Although all floors of The Constitution building are swamped with the packages, numerous mail sacks have not yet been opened, although the vanguard of the army of checkers has been at work three days.

The impresario of the contest estimates that if the wrappers on the packages were sewed together in a garment this garment would fit Stone Mountain, provide enough material for four Barnum & Bailey tents, make enough carpet to cover the floors of the capitol at Washington and enough would be left to wrap up all the all-day suckers used by the school kids in the two Americas during the scholastic years of 1924-25.

The impresario estimates further that if placed end to end they would girdle the globe five times and—but what's the use. Never was such a contest so successful in this part of the country, never were so many readers of a newspaper so interested in such a contest and never did a contest conducted by a southern newspaper attract such general interest over such a broad scope as did the twin matching contest of The Constitution which ended last Saturday night.

The conductor hopes—mind you, hopes to have the checking finished in time to announce the winners Sunday week, but he does not guarantee it. He simply says he will work his checkers day and night in the effort to finish the work and will announce the names of the winners in The Constitution as soon as it is humanly possible to do it.

not be named as chairmen of important committees.

Consideration of the 1925 budget, and expected requests of several delegations for new school buildings, or extensions and alterations of present structures, probably will be the other important matters considered at the meeting.

While a tentative budget presented to the board last week asks $3,677,318.03 as necessary to pay operating expenses for 1925 and clear the board of all debts incurred in 1924 and previous years, but which have not been paid, the finance committee of city council has indicated that about $600,000 less than that amount will be granted.

Budget May Be Cut.

While the budget has not been passed on by the board and presented to the finance committee, it is expected that a number of figures will be altered today and attempts made to fit the budget to the amount to be appropriated by the city.

New schools which probably will be asked include Hoke Smith Junior High school, Stewart avenue, Davis street, and Frank L. Stanton schools. The junior high school, it is explained has no building at present, some students being quartered in the Hill street school, while others are forced to attend Commercial High school. The other buildings mentioned, it is charged, are wooden frame buildings, and are little more than "fire traps."

GREAT BOULEVARD PLANNED IN HONOR

gallantry of the soldiers of the 82nd division.

It is planned to remove car tracks from the streets over which the new boulevard will run and to erect small stone markers, each bearing the name or organization of every officer or man who gave his life for his country and the date of his death.

This new boulevard will pass the state capitol—the seat of the state government and the Auditorium-Armory—home of the Georgia state militia, and will terminate where the Peace monument erected in the memory of soldiers of both the north and the south now stands.

The memorial boulevard will be a great civic as well as a patriotic development and warrants the utmost cooperation by every Atlantan, Mr. Harrison stated Monday.

Reunion is Planned.

It is the hope of the 82d division that, at the completion of the memorial boulevard, the city of Atlanta will invite all of the men who comprised the 82nd division to attend a reunion here for the unveiling of the shaft which is planned for Piedmont park.

On October 4, 1924, in Washington, D. C., a monument was erected in front of the Corcoran Art gallery in memory of the 5,586 soldiers of the First brigade who perished in Belgium and France during the World war. Their names appear on the shaft, and the cornerstone contains the records of the brigade. It was this memorial, Mr. Harrison stated, that first started agitation in favor of the present boulevard memorial plan and the monument for the 82nd heroes which is to follow it.

Mr. Harrison thanked the newspapers of Atlanta, and particularly The Constitution, for their efforts in making it possible to inaugurate plans for this boulevard memorial and the monument to honor the 82nd's heroes.

ALEX W. SMITH, SR., DIES OF APOPLEXY

Brilliant Legal Career.

Mr. Smith's brilliant legal career had its beginning when he was admitted to the Georgia bar in 1883. He had practiced law in Atlanta continuously since that time with the exception of four years he spent in service of the United States government, being stationed during that time in Washington. From 1885 to 1892 he was a member of the law firm of Abbott & Smith.

From 1892 to 1899 he and his brother, Victor Lamar Smith, composed the firm of Smith & Smith, and in 1899 the present firm of Smith, Hammond & Smith was organized, composed of Mr. Smith, his brother, and T. A. Hammond.

Service After War.

In the years that followed the world war Mr. Smith rendered invaluable service to the United States government, being retained by the railroad administration as special counsel to adjust and settle claims of the government growing out of the return to private ownership of railroads all over the country, which involved several hundred of millions of dollars in claims. He made his home in Washington for about four years, beginning in 1920, in connection with this work. He also was a major in the United States reserve corps.

Mr. Smith was a studious lawyer and his keen insight into legal technicalities and intricate points involved in the law, together with his magnetic personality, caused his advice to be sought on numerous occasions by students of the law and other individuals. In 1910 he was president of the Atlanta Bar association and in 1912 in recognition of his talent and ability he was named president of the Georgia Bar association.

He was at all times keenly interested in civic and religious activities, and evidence is given of his leadership in civic affairs by the fact that in 1895 he served as general manager of the gigantic Cotton States and International exposition held in Atlanta.

Lover of Music.

Mr. Smith was a great lover of music and threw himself whole-heartedly into any worthy endeavors along musical lines in Atlanta. For many years he was a member of the choir of the First Methodist church of Atlanta. At the time of his death he was an ardent member of St. Luke's Episcopal church and took an active part in all religious and charitable matters pertaining to the church.

The name of Mr. Smith was linked for many months with the recently-settled par clearance case as he served as chief counsel for the Pasagoula Bank of Mississippi, in its suit against the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

He was a member of the Capital City club of Atlanta, The Cosmos club of Washington and Georgia chapter, Sons of the Revolution.

CUT IN BUDGET OF CITY PLANNED

session at 2 o'clock today. It is probable that public hearings will be completed either today or early Wednesday, and that the committee will go into executive session Wednesday afternoon.

Less Than Needed.

Although almost $3,000,000 will be given to the schools, the amount will be more than $600,000 less than their budget requested, and it is probable that a special appropriation of at least $500,000 will be asked of council, the amount to be used in construction of new school buildings, said to be necessary to replace several present wooden structures.

With the city's total revenue for 1925 expected to reach $8,480,465, the school department's 26 per cent would amount to $2,207,520. In addition, the finance committee has decided the department will get $451,000 with which to repay the $350,000 loan and pay for the free text books. Aside from that figure, the schools will receive $231,186 from the state school fund; $20,000 from non-resident tuition fees, and $12,000 from the vocational education fund.

A number of department heads and civic organizations, as well as several individuals, presented requests to the committee Monday, but no action will be taken until the body goes into executive session.

Community Chest.

The largest request was for $75,000 to the Community Chest. Last year's committee recommended that the 1925 committee pay the money, and similar action was voted by council, making it practically certain that the amount will be placed in the finance sheet. No other appropriations will be made for charitable institutions.

The largest sums asked for operation of departments Monday were presented by L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks, and John Jentzen, chief of the sanitary department. Mr. Jentzen's budget showed that $432,747 will be needed to operate that department during the present year, or slightly less than was spent in 1924. He also requested $46,000 for new equipment, including an Elgin-motor pick-up street sweeper, several garbage trucks, and other carts and equipment. The street sweeper, he said, would save a large amount of money for the city. It is practically certain that the sweeper will be purchased, as the 1925 sanitary committee, as well as last year's committee have recommended it strongly.

The amount requested for the park department includes all operating costs, as well as a number of contemplated additions and improvements.

Pleas for funds were made by representatives of the chamber of commerce and the West End Woman's club, the latter organization asking $30,000 for establishment of an Uncle Remus branch of Carnegie library in West End.

Plea for Library Fund.

Mrs. E. G. Brogdon, president of the West End Woman's club; Councilman Wylie L. Moore and Alderman Jesse W. Armistead all addressed the committee in the plea for the library fund, stating that the city already has purchased a lot for the library and has promised to provide the money.

The chamber of commerce, through B. S. Barker, secretary, and its officers, asked an appropriation of $12,500, $8,500 of which would be used in connection with work of the industrial bureau, and $4,000 in extension and advertising work. Officers of the organization spoke at the meeting.

Salary increases were asked by practically every department, but it is considered improbable, in view of the city's strained financial condition, that any will be granted.

City Building Inspector C. J. Bowen requested a total fund of $19,430, including a pay hike of $25 per month for each employee of his office, as well as operating expenses. He also asked permission to employ an additional man to check plans at a salary of $2,400 a year.

Ask Special Collector.

A request for $43,678.85 was made by the tax assessors, to include operating costs and salaries. They also asked authority to hire a special tax investigator at a salary of $175 a month. Appointment of the additional investigator was recommended by last year's tax committee after the fight on the city's contract with H. E. Parker, and it is understood that, if the finance committee allows the money, Mr. Parker will be appointed to the new position.

A total of $20,500 was asked by Glenn Dewberry, custodian of city hall, $8,500 of which, he said, is needed for operating expenses, while $5,000 would be expended in repainting city hall, both inside and out, and $7,000 for a new elevator.

Tax Collector F. B. Florence requested additional help and pay increases for a number of employees, stating that $11,300 is necessary for operation of his department this year.

City Planning Board.

R. W. Torras, secretary and engineer of the city planning commission, requested $6,400, asking that an engineer, rodman and stenographer be assigned to the department this year.

Nineteen thousand three hundred dollars was asked by City Marshal W. E. Harwell for operating expenses and salaries. He asked an increase of $50 a month for the chief clerk in his office.

Dr. John P. Kennedy, city health officer, in addition to the amount set forth in his budget, asked $300 for examination of children by physicians, and $75 a month for a part-time physician for diphtheria and scarlet fever cases.

Salary increases for all employees and additional equipment were asked by Edward White, street improvement collector.

Representatives of the William A. Bass Junior High school requested $1,500 as the city's share on a $7,500 auditorium and gymnasium to be used at the school, and asked that the appropriation be placed first on the school list after the Hoke Smith Junior High school has been provided for.

Street Widening.

Claude L. Ashley asked $25,000 for widening of Edgewood avenue and Pryor street, and Hugh Richardson requested $12,500 to be used for improvement work on West Peachtree and North avenue.

Financial needs of the fire, police, water and construction departments, and Grady hospital will be among the chief items to be considered today, and it is expected that all department heads will be given an opportunity to appear before the committee during the day.

With requested appropriations reaching a huge total, the city's revenue will be less than $500,000 more than in 1924, Dr. Duvall stated. Approximately $200,000 over last year's figures will be collected in real estate taxes, it is anticipated, and water receipts also will be more than in 1924.

arrived in Atlanta Sunday morning from Washington to preside at sessions of the bar association, to attend the banquet in the evening at the Biltmore, which will mark the close of meeting.

J. H. Smith, principal of William A. Bass Junior High school, Monday announced approximately 1,000 boys of scouting age, will be in attendance at the auditorium at 4 o'clock this afternoon where the scout demonstrations will be held following the big parade which will form at 3:45 o'clock. Participating in the parade will be Governor Walker and Mayor Sims, in addition to Chief Executive West and other scout dignitaries.

In recognition of their meritorious work six Atlanta scouts will be awarded with Eagle Scout medals and certificates by Chief West. They are: Thomas Sandres, Troop 9; C. Y. House, Jr., Troop 38; Jacob Haas, Troop 38; Billy Sykes, Troop 40; Arthur Miller, Troop 37, and Byron Newell, Troop 24. The six scouts have passed the requirements to become Eagle Scouts, which is the highest possible honor that can be conferred on them.

Music for the parade will be furnished by a band of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians, and a large assemblage is anticipated for the conference Tuesday morning at the Y. M. C. A. building, on Luckie street.

A feature of the afternoon demonstrations at the auditorium will be the presentation of the Lewis H. Beck medal by Chief West to William B. Glascock, Jr., 18, of Waycross, an Emory university student, for his bravery in rescuing Mrs. J. N. Frankenstein while in the surf at St. Simon's Island July 1, 1924.

Troop 11, which won many laurels at the Scout Field day last year, will be honorary escort for Chief Executive West.

Byron Newell, Troop 24, and Arthur Miller, Troop 37, were made Eagle Scouts at the court of honor held Monday night at the commissioner's office in the courthouse.

Weavers Strike at Cut.

Fall River, Mass., January 12.—Three hundred weavers employed in the Davis Mills here walked out this morning in protest against a wage reduction of ten per cent, accepted by the Textile Council last week. They gave as reason for their action that the reduction had not been enforced in all mills in the city.

Fourteen Exploring Parties To Comb World's Lost Spots At Behest of Field Museum

Buried Cities, Forgotten Empires, Birds, Beasts and Fishes Are Included for Research.

BY OTIS PEABODY SWIFT.

Chicago, January 12.—Romance to thrill the hearts of men who still feel the boy's call to adventure, far horizons and the lonely places of the world, lies in the exploration plans of Field museum expeditions in 1925.

A world without romance? Not to the men, who, in interests of research, history and science, will go forth from Chicago in the next few months into tropic jungles, barren hinterlands of Asia, frigid wastelands of the far north, seeking birds and beasts, fishes and stones, fossils of the nightmare mammals of the past and ruins of lost empires and lost civilizations.

14 Expeditions Planned.

Fourteen expeditions are planned. In Mesopotamia, Professor S. Langdon will continue excavations of the ruins of pre-historic Kish. Another expedition will go out to Madgascar to seek a "lost empire," whose civilization, in history's dawn, ruled teeming millions of forgotten ages. In the Gobi desert, searches will be continued for fossils of monster prehistoric animals. Other fossils will be sought in the Argentine and in Brazil. Jungles of central Brazil, where no white man has ever gone before, will be searched by a party seeking specimens of gaudy feathered tropic birds. A woman, Dr. Hilda Heller, will march through the jungles of Central Africa with her naturalist husband, searching for a specimen of the white rhino.

Other Parties' Objectives.

From the tropics the colorful picture of romance passes to the forests and tundra of northern Newfoundland. This party seeks caribou. Artists will go with the party to paint a background for a museum exhibit.

Elsewhere in the western hemisphere scientists from the museum will be searching for data on the Hupa and Yurok Indian tribes of southern California, studying bird groups by the Canadian prairie lakes, collecting botanical and economic specimens in Cuba, and gathering Andean plants in Chile.

By Lake Titicaca, on the Andean roof of the world, still other Chicagoans will study myths of the pre-Inca races, civilizations that rose and fell 1,400 years before the Inca rule.

In a Grecian temple, called a museum, beside Lake Michigan in roaring prosaic Chicago, these dreams of adventure have become real.

Over the horizon of the world romance still beckons, and men still hear its call.

BENNETT MADE HEAD OF SWINE GROWERS

W. T. Bennett, of Griffin, Ga., was elected president of the Georgia Swine Growers' association at the opening meeting Monday at the Union stockyards of the association's two-day session here. Jule G. Liddell, of Athens, Ga., was reelected secretary and J. F. Hart, Jr., of Dublin, and H. K. Whelchel, of Atlanta, were named vice presidents.

Governor Clifford Walker and Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown will address the association at 11 o'clock this morning at a luncheon which will follow an inspection tour through the White Provision company. The remainder of the time will be devoted to inspection of stockyards.

The primary purpose of the association, it was explained, is to bring about production of a larger number of improved quality hogs in Georgia. Excellent crops which prevailed over the state last year will aid in increasing production, it is stated.

President H. B. Ralls, Jr., of Atlanta, Monday declared that Georgia swine growers were recovering from the period of depression which had been apparent for the last two years. Prospects for improvement are decidedly encouraging, he said.

Mr. Ralls urged middle and north Georgia stock growers to take advantage of superior opportunities afforded by the state for swine raising, explaining that south Georgia raises the bulk of the hogs in Georgia. In 1919 Georgia ranked fourth in swine production, he said, and every effort will be made to place the state back in the front rank

P. O. SALARY CHANGES OUTLINED BY CHILTON

Prospects of salary adjustments for postal employees were discussed Monday night by E. F. Chilton, division president of the Railway Mail association, at a meeting of the Georgia branch at the Ansley hotel. Mr. Chilton has just returned from Washington, where he aided in the fight for salary adjustment which has been before congress the past week.

'SUCCESS' RULES GIVEN BY SPEAKER

Robert E. M. Cowie, president of the American Railway Express company, who was guest Monday of Robert C. Alston, prominent Atlanta attorney, and counsel for the express company in this division, at a luncheon given at the Piedmont Driving club, gave as his rule for success "Luck always comes to the hard worker. The way to succeed is to select a job which appeals to you, stick to it, work hard, and avoid ruts."

The story of Mr. Cowie's own life reads like a novel. Coming to this country from Scotland in 1880 with only $5 in his pockets, he secured a job as office boy in the Cleveland office of the company of which he is now president. Determination, perseverance and hard work led him over the rocky paths of business until he finally achieved the highest position in an organization employing 135,000 persons and daily handling shipments valued at $100,000,000.

Mr. Cowie, who has toured the country during the last few months and has thorough insight into business conditions as represented to him by the leading business men of the country, said:

"I have talked to many conservative men—bankers, railroad presidents, manufacturers and leaders in every field of business, and they are unanimous in their conclusion that this country is facing an era of unprecedented prosperity. A prosperity which I believe will be hastened by adoption of the Dawes plan."

An interested and intimate concern in the operations of the American Express company was expressed by the organization's chief executive who pointed out that the company has over 15,000 women employees, many of whom receive excellent salaries, and whom he described as "the finest, hardest working women in the world." Though the express company handles 1,250,000 shipments daily, only about one package in a million is lost from the 28,500 offices, according to Mr. Cowie.

"Honest Service" is the only motto for business success advanced by the express executive who believes that the right kind of business is that which either supplies something people want, something they need or something they eat. Hard work is the best luck-piece any one can possess, Mr. Cowie believes.

SCHNEIDER FACES 2ND TRIAL TODAY

Warrenton, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—Eugene Schneider and Charlie Hattaway, convicted at the October term of Warren court for the murder of Hattie Wimberly, Augusta woman, whose body was found in the Ogeechee river, will be tried separately tomorrow, it was brought out today in the first day's session of court being held for the purpose of giving the two men a new trial. The day was consumed in qualifying jurors.

At the request of attorneys for the men court was adjourned this morning until 3 o'clock this afternoon in order that the records in the case could be examined. On resuming at 3 o'clock, a check of witnesses was made and it was found that Joe Ream, said to reside near Augusta, was missing. Court was adjourned for the day and Sheriff Hogan was ordered to Augusta to arrest Ream and bring him to Warrenton.

The case is being heard before Judge C. J. Perryman, who succeeded Judge Shirley. This is Judge Perryman's first trial in a Warren county court. The hearing will be resumed tomorrow morning with Schneider as the first of the two to be tried.

Attorneys for the defense are Colonel E. P. Davis, Cecil Davis, J. C. Newsome and Judge B. H. Walker. Marion Felts is prosecuting attorney.

RUM GREATEST ISSUE, ASSERTS DR. LYONS

Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in a sermon Sunday night, warned parents of liquor's peril to child welfare.

"You must make up your minds to choose between the welfare of your children and a bottle of liquor," he declared. "If the parents of Atlanta do not make a stand, the situation will degenerate into anarchy," he said. "The whole trouble lies in the attitude of the minds of the public toward the alcoholic question. Other lawlessness is simply an outgrowth of the lack of responsibility of many of our so-called best citizens," Dr. Lyons asserted.

Dr. Lyons also declared that anti-prohibitionist forces are well organized and that they are determined to defeat the purposes of the framers of the eighteenth amendment. He said that the principle of this law is the same as that of any other statute on the law books of the nation—the control of the individual for the benefit of society—but that many people are attempting to evade it by raising the cry of personal liberty.

GRESS WILL APPEAR IN WHITE TAX CASE

T. R. Gress, assistant attorney general for Georgia, will leave today for Washington, where he goes to appear for the state before the United States supreme court in the J. B. White tax case from Augusta.

Other attorneys for the state are Benjamin E. Pierce, Wallace B. Pierce and William K. Miller, of Augusta.

The White tax case represents an effort on the part of Georgia, Mr. Gress stated Monday, to collect approximately $300,000 in back taxes for a period of seven years due, it is claimed, on stocks and bonds owned by Mr. White. The property was not returned as property for taxation and was discovered only after the death of the owner, it is claimed.

The case originally was heard in United States district court for south Georgia, where a decision was rendered for the defendants, the executors of the White estate. The state then appealed.

While in Washington, it was stated, Mr. Gress will endeavor to have the war department forbid sale of cigars or cigarettes to civilians on all government reservations in the state. It was recently held that these goods sold on government reservations, did not have to carry the state revenue stamp, and, following this decision, an order was issued barring sale to civilians on the reservation at Fort McPherson. Mr. Greer will seek to have this order extended to cover all such reservations in the state.

I. G. MARKEY ADDRESSES LOCAL TRAFFIC CLUB

I. G. Markey, manager of the Southern Weighing and Inspection bureau Monday was principal speaker at a meeting of the Traffic club, at the Ansley hotel.

Mr. Markey stated that "it was generally thought by the public that the bureau was strictly a revenue getter for the railroads, but that the railroads formed the bureau for the sole purpose of creating uniformity among the carriers as well as shippers in order to be fair to both interests."

"Shippers welcome suggestions from the bureau as to methods of loading and assistance wherever possible to keep down loss and damage," Mr. Markey added. Functions of the bureau also were outlined by the speaker.

The address was the first of a series of educational lectures which has been planned by the program committee for the next few months.

GEORGIA RIVERS OVERFLOW BANKS

Macon, Ga., January 12.—The waters of the Ocmulgee river at Macon were receding this morning but the river was still overflowing its banks in places. The crest of the flood passed here last night, the river having reached a height of 19.8 feet. During the night the river fell about a foot and by midnight a drop of two or three feet more is expected.

The high water has not interfered with railway schedules, although the water had been high around the Southern railway tracks in places. Lowlands around Macon are flooded.

Reports from Houston county and other points south of Macon early today stated that high water had put many wooden bridges out of commission.

32-FOOT RISE AT AUGUSTA.

Augusta, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—After reaching a height of 32 feet, 6 inches, the Savannah river at Augusta remained during the early part of the day at a standstill, and tonight at 8 o'clock began a gradual fall. The rise of the river, which was rapid, flooded the lowlands below the city and at one time threatened a negro settlement at Hamburg, S. C., just across the river from Augusta.

Street car service from north Augusta was suspended during the day, when waters flooded the tracks. Brick plants located in the low sections of South Carolina, opposite Augusta, were flooded. Several large cotton mills in Augusta that depend on water power were forced to close down on account of the high water which flooded wheels in the pits. It is not believed that any serious damage has resulted from the water as most of the plants in the low sections moved valuable machinery and stock to higher ground.

JAZZ IS LURING MANY OUTSIDERS TO CONCERT HERE

The lure of jazz as played by the foremost exponent of the "new American music" has extended for at least a hundred miles around Atlanta, judging from the pilgrimage to be made from surrounding towns for the Paul Whiteman concert Thursday night at the auditorium.

Russell Bridges, manager of the local engagement of Mr. Whiteman and his 25 musicians, said Monday that blocks of seats had been taken by parties from Rome, Macon, Newnan, Athens, Griffin and Cartersville, while numerous Marietta commuters had made reservations. He estimates an out-of-town attendance of at least 1,000 persons.

Sale of seats for the Whiteman concert is being conducted at the Phillips & Crew music store.

TRACTION COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING TODAY

The first meeting of the newly appointed special traction committee of city council will be held this afternoon, it was announced Monday by Alderman J. L. McLendon, chairman.

Alderman McLendon was named chairman of the 1924 committee to succeed Alderman J. R. Bachman, who had served in that capacity since the committee was first appointed in December, 1923.

Other members are Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, Councilman W. C. Jenkins, James L. Wells, and J. A. Beall.

While all meetings will be held behind closed doors, it is expected that the first report submitted will deal with the jitney situation, the requested raise in street car fares, and other matters pertaining to the Georgia Railway and Power company's relief petition.

FERTILIZER RATE REVISION SOUGHT

Notice was received Monday by the Georgia Public Service commission, the tcarrires operating in this territory had filed a complaint with the interstate commerce commission, at Washington, dealing with fertilizer freight rates in Georgia. While differences between the rates now in operation and those desired by the carriers are not known, the petition, of course, asks for increases.

Rates now in effect in Georgia are the old fertilizer rates which have been effective for a number of years. On September 26, 1924, the Georgia commission issued an order putting new rates into effect on and after November 15. The carriers, however, obtained an injunction in the United States district court for this district, claiming that the revision amounted to approximately a 26 per cent increase. On December 12, the Georgia commission vacated its order for revised rates, which, of course, resulted in dissolving the court proceedings.

It is believed that the carriers are now seeking to put into effect rates on fertilizers in Georgia which they submitted to the commission during a general investigation held in September, 1921. The ratio of increase, however, was not known Monday at the commission offices.

MRS. ELLEN BELLAMY SUCCUMBS AT MACON

Macon, Ga., January 12.—Mrs. Ellen Washington Bellamy, 84, descendant of the family of George Washington, first president of the United States and one of the oldest and best-known women of Macon, died at a local hospital early today. She had been in declining health since last May.

Mrs. Bellamy was born at Milledgeville, Ga., but was reared in Macon, where her family moved during her girlhood. Her father, John Washington, was one of Macon's first mayors. Her mother, Mary Hammond Washington, came from Virginia, where her family was prominent among the first families of that state. The Mary Hammond Washington chapter, D. A. R., of Macon, was named in honor of Mrs. Bellamy's mother.

Mrs. Bellamy was the last survivor of her immediate family. She leaves a nephew, John Washington, of Macon, and a niece, Mrs. Virginia Washington Wood, of Savannah.

The funeral will be held from the Washington library here Tuesday, Rev. C. H. Lee, rector of St. Paul's church, officiating. Interment will be at the family cemetery here.

DAVIS MILITANTLY MEETS BRIBE ISSUE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Topeka, Kan., January 12.—Jonathan M. Davis, "dirt farmer" governor of Kansas, stepped out of office today at the end of a turbulent two-year term, just a few hours after his arrest on a charge of accepting a $1,250 bribe for a pardon.

Jointly charged with the retired executive is his son, Russell G. Davis, 28, who was caught in the act of receiving the money and delivering the pardon to Fred W. Pollman, former banker and convicted forger. Both were released on bond of $1,000. Their preliminary hearing was set for January 23.

Governor Davis militantly met the issue. He went to court to face the accusation, made bond, wrote a letter to the presiding legislators of the legislature demnading "a full and complete investigation" of his clemency record, and then carried through his part in the inauguration ceremonies, turning over his office to the incoming governor, Ben S. Paulen, republican.

Committed No Crime.

"I stand before you today, the only governor of Kansas ever placed under arrest while in office," Governor Davis told the inaugural crowd that packed the city auditorium.

"I have committed no crime. I have not violated the oath of office I took two years ago. I have neither solicited or accepted a bribe. Throughout my official conduct, I have had an ear to the poor and the downtrodden. The greater portion of the paroles granted have been cases in which the imprisonment of a man was causing others to suffer even more than himself.

"A great newspaper in search of prestige and influence has sought to besmirch me. They have invaded the sancity of my home and sought to solicit the efforts of criminals and those of low character. The people of Kansas will resent such attempts."

Audience Applauds Address.

The audience applauded long and loud as the governor finished his address with a word of hearty welcome to his successor.

The charges against Governor Davis and his son were filed by Tinkham Veale, retiring county attorney of Shawnee county, when the court of Topeka opened this morning. Paul Heinz, the new county attorney, will prosecute the case.

Learning of the issuance of warrants shortly after 10 o'clock, Governor Davis and his son went to the court house and were met by a crowd of business men and politicians eager to sign their bonds. Included in the six men who went their bonds was J. R. Burrow, head of the largest banking institution in the city and a republican leader. Davis is a democrat.

State officials, regardless of party lines, declared their regrets that the governor was not permitted to retire from office before the filing of the charges. Bondsmen for the executive termed the immediate srevice of the warrants "an outrage" and "purposeful humiliation" of Mr. Davis. One said he had been told to appear at court "in 20 minutes" or the governor would be placed under arrest.

Demands Resignation Of Bank Commissioner

Kansas City, Mo., January 12. Attorney General Griffiths this afternoon demanded the resignation of Carl J. Peterson, state bank commissioner appointed by Governor Jonathan M. Davis, says a special dispatch to the Kansas City Star from its Topeka bureau.

Attorney General Grfiiths took action on the strength of an affidavit made by A. L. Oswald, a lawyer of Hutchinson, Kansas, in which it is charged Peterson demanded $1,000 for the parole of Walter Grundy, Hutchinson bank wrecker, now serving a term in the Kansas penitentiary, the Star dispatch says.

UNDERWOOD'S BILL FACES TEST TODAY

Washington, January 12.—The fate of the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill will be known tomorrow when the senate will vote on the Jones substitute to create a commission to make recommendations to congress for disposition of the project.

If the Underwood bill successfully hurdles this substitute, introduced by the republican whip, senate leaders generally agree that its passage is assured. The Alabama senator was confident tonight that his bill would pass.

The situation was clarified late today when Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, leading the opposition to the Underwood bill, asked for unanimous consent to vote on the Jones amendment not later than 2 o'clock tomorrow and to limit debate to 10 minutes for each senator.

DETROIT IS CHOSEN AS BAR MEET SITE

Selection of Detroit as the 1925 convention city and consideration of important reports marked Monday's sessions of the executive committee of the American Bar association meeting here, with Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes as presiding officer.

The convention will be held September 2 to 4 and many reports now under consideration will be submitted to the full membership of the association. Providence, R. I., and St. Louis, Mo., were Detroit's opponents in the contest for the convention.

Secretary Hughes, president of the association, spent most of the day with the committee and had very little to say for publication.

Letter Self-Explanatory.

"There is nothing to be said about my retirement from the cabinet," he remarked. "My letter to the president and his answer speak for themselves."

Asked if his resignation foreshadowed an intention to become a candidate for president four years from now, the secretary indicated he has no further political ambitions, but desires to devote his time to professional work.

"I want to take a little vacation after I retire on March 4," Mr. Hughes said. "But I have not made my plans as yet and do not know where I shall go or what I shall do, except that I am going to rest. Then I shall resume the practice of law with my old firm."

Bankruptcy Laws.

Abuses of the bankruptcy laws and remedies necessary for correction have been made the basis of a special committee's investigation. Thomas F. Howe, Chicago, chairman of the committee of professional ethics and grievances; Simon Fleischmann, Buffalo, chairman of the special committee on bankruptcy, and Howard Carlisle, Spartanburg, S. C., head of the committee on ethics of the Commercial Law League of America, have been in conference on the subject.

Charles A. Boston, New York, chairman of the committee on ethics, has started a movement to raise funds for the compilation of a model code of criminal procedure and the association will endeavor to arouse interest in the bill, providing for the indexing and digesting of current legislation, now before congress. William Draper Lewis, dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, and executive secretary of the American Institute of Law, conferred with Mr. Boston relative to the model code project.

Americanization and citizenship will have prominent places in the association's program this year, according to present indications. Josiah Marvel, Wilmington, Del., chairman of the committee, reported progress in the organization of citizenship committees in every state. Particular attention is being given to work of this nature in the public schools, it was stated.

INGENIOUS EXPLANATIONS ARE OFFERED IN PARIS.

Paris, January 12.—Paris newspapers offer explanations for the resignation of Secretary Hughes and for the appointment of Ambassador Kellogg to succeed him which are more ingenious than convincing.

Pertinax of the Echo de Paris, believes Mr. Hughes is resigning because he does not "see eye to eye" with President Coolidge. The writer says that the president "dominated by the senate," desires a policy of isolation, while Secretary Hughes "who has spent his life among the half European society of New York" is inclined to intervene in the old world controversies.

Pertinax says it is certain that the "reign of the republican senate will be confirmed."

He adds that as a "lawyer trained in the country, the secretary of state designate is probably not big enough a man to resist the assembly or to carry it with him."

Secretary Hughes, in the view of M. St. Brice of Le Journal, is retiring "because he intends to run for president."

GERMANY BELIEVES HUGHES WILL RUN FOR PRESIDENT.

Hamburg, Germany, January 12.—Commenting on his resignation, the Hamburger Nachrichten expresses the belief that Charles E. Hughes intends to run for president. The paper terms him "a sensible and moderate politician."

Referring to Mr. Hughes' New Haven reparation speech which formed the basis of Chancellor Cuno's economic program, the paper observes: "In it for the first time, a statesman among Germany's former enemies showed a desire for conciliation and pointed out possibilities for a solution, which while not acceptable in all details to Germany, were certainly hopeful."

CLUBWOMEN BACK FIGHT ON PISTOL

pistols, will be taken up by the ordinance committee of the Atlanta city council at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

3. Receipt of a communication, signed by T. A. Cunningham, as follows: "All people ought to love law and order and every lover of either admires the fearless stand of The Constitution against the pistol."

4. A communication, signed by B. W. Fuller, as follows: "I wish to congratulate The Constitution on the success it is making in your war against the pistol. I hope the good work will spread all over the southern states and that the legislature will put its shoulders to the wheels and pass such laws as you advise."

5. The Journal of Labor announces that, since joining with The Constitution in the fight on pistols, it has received endless congratulatory letters from all over the country.

Never Needed Pistol.

6. B. F. Togner writes The Constitution as follows from White Sulphur Springs, Ga.: "I am 91 years old and never have seen the need of a pistol. I never owned one except during the civil war, and had no use for it then. I see many suggestions what to do with the pistol. Why not tax it out of use? It may help to pay the Georgia tax."

7. At a meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association, members of the board unanimously indorsed and commended the anti-pistol campaign initiated and inaugurated by The Atlanta Constitution. A letter from the association declares that "it is evident that your courageous stand on this vital question is meeting with the approval of practically the entire community, and it is the sincere hope of the members of the board that you leave no stone unturned to push this campaign to a successful conclusion."

8. Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., in an address to the Spalding county grand jury at the opening of the superior court at Griffin, Ga., Monday told the jurymen to consider the man who carries a pistol as a murderer at heart.

Emphasize Importance.

Two other letters emphasizing the importance of The Constitution's campaign were received, as follows:

"Editor Constitution: We congratulate you in the great effort you are making to put the pistol-toter out of business. May the Lord bless you and enable you to continue the great work you are doing through The Atlanta Constitution for our city of Atlanta, the state of Georgia, the great southland and the nation.

"Respectfully yours,
"E. P. JOHNSON, Pastor.
"S. W. WALKER,
"Chairman, Deacon Board Reed Street Baptist Church (Col.).
"Atlanta, January 11, 1925."

Editor Constitution—I wish to congratulate you on your campaign against the 'pistol toter.' Undoubtedly this is a deserving campaign and your work should have the cooperation of every citizen of this state, even the pistol toter, himself. He is even endangered by his own acts and belief.

"A man with a pistol on his person is more dangerous than a disease. We may guard against the deadliest disease, but do we know when to guard against the pistol?

"We live in a civilized state. Why do we need the pistol? There are few if any, wild animals. The law protects us, so where is the pistol needed in our state?

"If the great work of The Constitution, backed and encouraged by the citizens of Georgia, does not bring results, we may live over the days of knight-errantry, and feel unsafe even at home. The campaign against the pistol can not afford to be a failure.

"May your good work go on and may you and your supporters have strength and courage, throughout 1925 not only to uphold, but see this, a New Year's resolution. 'The pistol must go,' a reality and not a hoped for dream. You are doing a great and noble service for mankind.

Refers to Smith's Death.

In beginning his speech Secretary Hughes referred to the sudden death of Alex W. Smith, prominent Atlanta lawyer, expressing the keen regret of the members of the executive committee of the Amreican Bar association.

"I should desire at the very beginning to have you know that I realized, as I am sure my brethren of the bar association who are visiting Atlanta realized, the very great sorrow with which you have been visited this evening in that sudden and tragic bereavement," he said. "One of your most distinguished citizens has been stricken—fatally; and I would have you know that in this hour of cheer and cordial welcome that we partake with you in that sadness which you must feel. At the same time, we can but know that the time will come when each of us must meet that summons, and I feel that no one could ask for a happier transition than to go in the full tide of life and usefulness, as Providence may ordain.

"You have given us a welcome which in every way is an illustration of the generous heart of the south. We have not had the sunny sky; we have not had the very delightful atmosphere which we associate with this climate in our thought; but the warmth of your greeting has made us quite oblivious of all these conditions, and we have been so happy in our contact with you and in the privilege of working in Atlanta, that we have lost all thought of externals; and I am sure we could not well have imagined any greater pleasure than we have had the pleasure of enjoying during this brief stay.

Fight of American Bar.

After telling a few funny stories Secretary Hughes discussed briefly the fight made by the American Bar association to maintain high standards of admission to the bars throughout all the states.

"Now, in our association, we are trying to maintain the standards of admission to the honorable profession of the law at a high level. We have made very little progress, in that, specifically. I regret to say the recommendations of the American Bar association have not been followed out if at all, in our state (New York). But, nevertheless, the pressure exerted in our different communities, to maintain high standards to our profession is exerted through our Bar association; and we continually need to reinforce that profession. That profession must ever be a learned profession. It is not a profession to which a man of mere adaptability may hope to aspire. It should be a learned profession, the entrance to which demands qualifications of training and high standards of character; and I hope to see our association, more and more throughout the country, insist upon the moral qualifications of those seeking admission to the bar.

"And then, we maintain the spirit of our organizations by those who insist upon the professional ideal in our numbers. The true lawyer need never be afraid of his profession being commercialized. We are a profession in the last analysis because we have the sentiment of loyalty. There are some things far more important to us than a reward that can be given, and the one thing which stands out supreme in our conception of privilege and beauty, is the sentiment of loyalty—loyalty to the client, loyalty to the law, loyalty to the government—all three. Loyalty to client—they say in the old days, the witty diplomatist wrote in a book that the ambassador sent abroad to represent his nation was an honest man at home who was sent abroad to lie for his country. And the popular impression is that a lawyer is retained to lie for his client.

Lawyers Are Praised.

"Now, we all know that a lawyer worthy of his profession never has occasion to lie for his client; and we know that loyalty to the law is the supreme loyalty of the lawyer in practice. Every day and all day he stands for the law; he stands for the rights of his clients under the law. He stands for the explication of the law as it must be applied in all walks of life. But the true man, the only man honored by his profession, is the man who in the privacy of his office, unobserved by the people is constantly standing for loyalty to the law of his land.

"The lawyers are the most law-abiding people in the world. The lawyer is loyal to his government. We do not need any higher standards than those we all recognize, if we only had a keen professional spirit, every scoundrel in the profession who did not live up to them should receive the ostracism he deserves. It is true in the profession we are striving to maintain this moral discipline and to justify ourselves as professional men. I would not decry the substantial rewards of professional work; but there is no more pitiable spectacle in life than the lawyer who has come to his sixties, wealthy, but with the reputation among the members of his profession that he is a skilled manipulator, and a man whom every honorable lawyer in his community regards as a rascal unworthy of the confidence of anyone. I know of nothing more pitiable.

Tribute to Lamar.

Secretary Hughes then paid tribute to the services and achievements of Justice Joseph Lamar on the United States supreme court bench. In discussing his association with Justice Lamar, Secretary Hughes said:

"I do not feel strange in coming here to Georgia. I do not feel as a stranger among you at all, for a country is interpreted by its best citizens. I had the rare good fortune for a number of years to sit on the bench with a distinguished son of this state, whom it was an honor and a privilege to know. His generous spirit, his geniality, his good humor, and his untiring industry and sound learning made him one of the great pillars of strength on the supreme bench of the United States. I refer to Mr. Justice Lamar (prolonged applause). He was one of those joyous spirits whom to know was a benediction; and I shall never forget the pleasure of that intimacy and the knowledge that I derived of your great state through that companionship."

Activities of Association.

In outlining needed activities of the association Secretary Hughes said:

"I would not speak here of anything controversial, but I am glad to feel that in this country, for a time at least, we have the supreme court of the United States secure from the attacks of politicians.

"We are united in many things. We are united in our sense of the importance of the institutions of justice; and throughout this land, without regard to party, without regard to section, in every part of our country, the people who make this country, who serve it, the people who are intent upon all the progress which can be rationally obtained, are those who are determined to protect our courts from the assaults of demagogues. I find great comfort in that.

"As I look throughout the world the one great need to me appears to be, not some formula or rule, but the law-abiding sentiment throughout the land, the disposition to be reasonable, to be fair, to settle things according to available standards of justice, to enforce the conceptions of justice against the demands of brute force. That is what it will come to at the end. All our plans for law and order and peace, all rest on that sentiment. It is useless to be an apostle of truth throughout the world unless you are an apostle of truth at home. It is useless to talk of the great institutions of justice throughout the world unless you have them at home. This great institution, the American Bar association, which I represent here tonight is devoted to that end.

Judge Meldrim was then introduced as toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Middlebrooks referred to Judge Meldrim's services as a president of the American Bar association and complimented him on his record as a jurist. Judge Meldrim spoke briefly of Georgia's record as a law abiding state and as a state true in its support of its constitution. He then presented Judge Russell who reviewed the legal achievements of Secretary Hughes and paid tribute to his record as a lawyer, as governor of New York, as a member of the United States Supreme court and as Secretary of State of the United States.

Mr. Middlebrooks, in welcoming Secretary Hughes and the visiting members of the executive committee of the American Bar Association expressed the hope that Atlanta some day would entertain the annual meeting of the association.

"The lawyers of Atlanta welcome these distinguished guests here tonight and hope the committee will meet here often" he said. "We are ambitious enough to hope that in the near future it will be our pleasure to entertain the entire association. We welcome the distinguished president. He has been honored by his home city many times. He has served twice as governor of New York. He has been a member of the highest court in the land. He has represented his country in many conferences with diplomats of foreign countries. He has held some of the highest posts in our government but I daresay there is no honor he prizes more than the honor of serving as president of the American Bar association. We members realize that he is a statesman, an able lawyer, a great jurist and a man in whom the people of this country impose the fullest confidence regardless of their political affiliations."

Have You Piles?

Then You Have Something to Learn

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cuttings nor any amount of treatment with ointment and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription, HEM-ROID, is now sold by all druggists. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from Jacobs' Drug Stores today. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and should do the same for you—it seldom fails.—(adv.)

The solicitor general will be in Harris superior court at Hamilton tomorrow morning, but expects to go to Butler during the afternoon.

Sheriff McGuffin told The Enquirer-Sun over long distance telephone tonight that he had taken no steps in remedying the defects in the hanging plans, but that he will carry out whatever advice Mr. Flournoy gives in the matter.

NEW JURY INDICTS NINE AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—True bills were returned by the new jury today against nine of the men who last week were indicted by the Clarke county grand jury upon evidence said to have been worked up by a Ku Klux Klan investigator. The original indictments were not allowed to stand because attorneys for 11 of the 13 original defendants charged that three members of the jury are klansmen and parties to the prosecution. The three members were discharged by Solicitor General Henry H. West, who stated in open court that he called the jury back for that purpose after being told that defense attorneys would raise objections.

After the jury was purged of the three alleged klansmen, the jury returned new indictments against the following persons:

W. T. James, Henry Culp, Asa Hammond, J. H. Lumpkin, John Herring, Dr. H. D. Coffee, T. C. Husted, James M. Burch and Howard Graham. All are charged with gaming.

T. C. Husted and Asa Hammond are charged with operating a gaming house and with having whisky.

New indictments were not made in the following cases:

May Epps, John McCune, Abe Farbstein and Max Pinson, who were originally charged with selling whisky. The old indictments remain in effect in their cases.

The jury returning the new indictments was composed of the following: H. J. Rowe, foreman; R. D. Hancock, L. L. Lester, J. F. Whitehead, George A. Booth, Sol J. Boley, C. D. Chandler, A. E. Davison, W. H. Kytle, J. Talmadge Allen, George H. Crane, R. J. Hardeman, T. H. Dozier, E. E. Lamkin, O. W. Bowen, W. R. Bedgood, E. L. Weir, L. M. Leathers and C. W. Crook.

Members of the jury displaced are J. R. Bullock, merchant; E. Johnson, justice court bailiff, and Ham Autry, farmer.

"In view of the fact that I understood that the defendants were about to challenge the qualifications of certain men on the grand jury, I called it back to purge it of members objected to," Solicitor West said. "I do not believe any members of the jury are prosecutors in these cases. However, I wanted to avoid any technicalities. My office is not interested in the fight between the klan and the defendants and will prosecute the indictments impartially."

250 ATTEND OPENING OF METHODIST PARLEY

Approximately 250 pastors and laymen, representing the Southeastern district of the Methodist churches, assembled at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, at the Park Street Methodist church, for the first session of a five-day conference.

These meetings are being held for the purpose of discussing plans for the year. A program is to be mapped out and adopted by the conference, all churches of the district abiding by it.

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, of West Virginia, is expected to arrive in Atlanta today and will be one of the chief speakers at the conference.

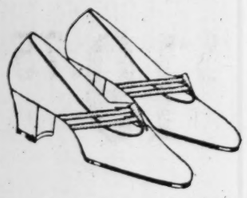

The opening session Monday was devoted to discussion of a program for 1925 and three addresses by Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt, presiding elder of the Atlanta district; Dr. J. C. Jarrell, general secretary of the hospital board of Southern Methodist church; and S. P. Wiggins, missionary secretary of the North Georgia conference.

Dr. Hunnicutt spoke on the need of a definite goal of achievement for the church. "Each church should strive for an average attendance of 80 per cent," he declared. "At the prayer meetings each Wednesday night an attendance of 25 per cent at least should be present. A definite purpose should be continuously before the congregation," he added. He severely criticised churches for not attempting to do more and for not having a definite purpose.

GEORGE KEENE NAMED GEORGIA MESSENGER

Georgia's presidential state electors, meeting Monday at the state capitol, officially cast the state's 14 votes for John W. Davis as president and Charles W. Bryan as vice president, standard-bearers of the democratic party in the election of last November.

George Keene, manager of the Kimball house, was named messenger to carry the state vote to the electoral college when it meets in Washington on the second Wednesday in February. Mrs. Lon Dickey, of Fitzgerald, was elected alternate messenger. Nat E. Harris, former governor of the state and one of the two electors-at-large, presided. All 14 electors were present with the exception of John G. Valentino, of Savannah, Mrs. S. K. Neer, of Atlanta, being named to fill the vacancy.

The following electors were present: First district, Newton J. Norman; second district, C. M. Ledbetter; third district, Mrs. Leon Dickey; fourth district, Buford Boykin; fifth district, J. T. Duncan; sixth district, D. P. Nelson; seventh district, C. M. Milam; eighth district, J. C. Williams; ninth district, W. B. Rice; tenth district, R. V. Harris; eleventh district, W. R. Wilson, and twelfth district, G. O. Stone. Electors-at-large were former Governor Harris and Mrs. Neer.

COOLIDGE AND DAWES CHOSEN BY ELECTORS.

Washington, January 12.—Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes were elected president and vice president, respectively, today.

The electors for whom the American voters directly cast their ballots last November met in the respective states, canvassed the popular vote and in accordance with the constitution cast their ballots for president and vice president.

This vote of the electors will be certified to the president of the senate by each of the 48 state meetings, and will be opened at a joint session of the senate and house February 18.

The electors in each state also selected today one of their number to bring the vote to Washington. An appropriation of $12,500 for the expense of these electoral messengers now is pending, although an attempt was made recently in the senate to legalize transmission of the vote by mail.

Supreme Court Refuses Appeal for Decision In Moultrie Bank Case

Washington, January 12.—The supreme court refused today to grant appeals to bring up for decision:

The right of the Citizens' bank of Moultrie, Ga., to certain property of the Moultrie Creamery and Produce company, when the latter went into bankruptcy, as presented by a case brought by J. S. Schofield's Sons company and others.

The right of the bank to realize on a commodity pledged as security for a loan, when the property had not been removed from the premises of the company which negotiated the loan, and which subsequently went into bankruptcy, as raised in a case from Baltimore, brought by the Western National bank against the trustee in bankruptcy of the Spanish-American Cork products company.

FIREMAN STRUCK BY SPEEDING CAR, RUSHED TO GRADY

Lieutenant Jasper Tumlin, popular member of the Atlanta fire department, stationed at Engine House No. 2, was run down late Monday night by an automobile driven by an unidentified driver, who, according to witnesses, increased his speed after striking the fireman.

Tumlin was taken to his home at 61 South Moreland avenue and physicians summoned. Later he was removed to Grady hospital. His right arm was broken and his head badly lacerated.

ALABAMA LAWYER PRAISES 'GATE CITY'

Atlanta's rapid growth and expansion both in commerce and building activity during 1924 came in for exalted praise from Col. Phares Coleman, prominent Birmingham lawyer, who is attending at the executive meeting of the American Bar association.

Col. Coleman, who is recognized as one of the prominent attorneys and civic leaders in the Alabama metropolis, expressed admiration for the civic spirit exemplified by Atlanta and declared that close on the lead of "Dixie's Capital," was Birmingham, showing substantial increases in commerce and building during the last 12 months.

With the erection of several office buildings and a new hotel, the Redmont, which is to be operated as one of the Dinkler Hotel chain, Birmingham's building records during 1924 revealed an era of prosperity and renewed commercial interest be declared.

Walker Will Not Attend Trials Of Athens Cases

Governor Clifford Walker will not go to Athens Wednesday to attend the trials of a number of citizens there who have been indicted as a result of alleged "clean-up" activities staged by officials of the Ku Klux Klan, he stated Monday night. The governor also declared that he had received no subpoenas in the cases and, in fact, had received no communications about the matter, either from the court or from parties interested.

Reports from Athens stated that subpoenas had been issued to bring the governor to Athens as a witness in the cases, which have attracted wide attention, due to the fact that the evidence on which the indictments were brought was submitted to the grand jury of Clarke county by officials of the Athens klan organization and by a klan investigator, sent there from the organization headquarters in Atlanta. It was stated by Athens klansmen that this investigator was sent to Athens following a conference attended by General Nathan Bedford Forrest, grand dragon of the Georgia klan, by the kleagle of the Athens klan and the governor.

Governor Walker, however, denied that he was ever present at such a conference, but added that he recalled the statement being made that the klan was conducting such an investigation, during the course of a conference in his office on general law enforcement conditions throughout the state.

Charges on which indictments were brought included violations of state prohibition laws, gambling, and disorderly conduct and the accused include several prominent citizens, a member of the Athens city council, and the Athens city recorder.

CHURCH LEADERS OPEN GEORGIA CONFERENCE

Griffin, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—Rev. B. F. Foster, of Macon, Dr. George Hamilton Combs, of Kansas City, Dr. L. O. Bricker, of Atlanta, and Dr. O. H. Pritchard, of Indianapolis, are among prominent leaders who are in Griffin to attend the state-wide conference of Christian churches, which opened tonight for a three-days' session at the First Christian church. Delegates began arriving this afternoon and by night there were 150 or 200 in the city.

The conference was preceded by a preachers' meeting this afternoon, over which Dr. Foster presided, and at which addresses were made by the Rev. J. A. Taylor, state secretary, explaining the purposes and plans of the meeting; Dr. Pritchard, on the "Need of a Cooperative Ministry," and a round table discussion in which Rev. J. Randall Farris, of Savannah, Rev. John H. Wood, of Rome, and others took part.

The conference opened tonight with a song service. Among the speakers were Rev. G. H. Hinnat, of Griffin, Rev. F. L. Adams, of Atlanta, and Sam I. Smith, of Jackson. Rev. PASTOR AT WAR ON NEWSPAPERS

Jacksonville, Fla., January 12.—Dr. Len G. Broughton, pastor of the First Baptist church, in his sermon last night declared war on the Jacksonville Journal and the Florida Times-Union, local newspapers, because of their attitude regarding races in Miami. Both newspapers refused advertisements submitted by Dr. Broughton on the grounds that the Miami race officials had assured the public that there would be no bookmaking and that publication of the advertisements would be interpreted as a discourtesy to a sister city.

WILL FIGHT PLAN TO APPOINT DIAL

Washington, January 12.—Aroused by reports that President Coolidge plans to appoint Senator Dial, democrat, South Carolina, to the interstate commerce commission, democratic senators are preparing to wage a fight on the South Carolina senator, should his nomination be sent to the senate, and have conveyed notice of their determination to the president.

White house officials have refused to acknowledge that Senator Dial is under consideration for the commerce commission, although Commissioner Potter soon will retire and the vacancy will be filled by appointment of a democrat.

Senator Dial recently was taken to task by his democratic colleagues in the senate for a speech attacking democratic methods in the last campaign, which he later withdrew from the record. He also cast the sole democratic and deciding vote to sustain the president's veto of the postal pay bill.

The position of the democratic senators who plan to oppose any nomination of Senator Dial is that the vacancy should be filled by the appointment of a democrat of unquestioned regularity and that Senator Dial does not represent the real membership of the democratic party.

Members of the Texas delegation in congress, including Senators Sheppard and Mayfield and Representatives Garrer, Sumners and Sanders, presented to the president today the name of Clarence E. Gilmore, chairman of the Texas railroad commission, for appointment to the Potter vacancy.

RADIO MONOPOLY HEARING STARTS UPON MARCH 18

Washington, January 12.—Hearing against a number of companies, alleging conspiracy to restrain competition and create a monopoly in manufacture, purchase and sale in interstate commerce of radio and other electrical devices and apparatus, will be started by the federal trade commission March 18, at New York.

The defendants named in the complaint are the General Electric company, American Telephone and Telegraph company, Western Electric company, Inc., Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, International Radio Telegraph company, United Fruit company, Wireless Specialty Apparatus company and the Radio Corporation of America.

The complaint also charges in substance that the respondents "have combined and conspired for the purpose and with the effect of restraining competition and creating a monopoly in domestic and transoceanic radio communication and broadcasting."

George Requests Atlanta-Capital Road Be No. 1

Washington, January 12.—(Special.)—The popular highway from Atlanta to the national capital, over which thousands of tourists pass in going from south to north and north to south, would be No. 1 of all the highways of the country, if a request from Senator George to the bureau of public roads here is accepted.

Senator George has asked the bureau that this highway be given the first number in its numerical designation of national highways, which is soon to be undertaken.

In making his request Senator George pointed out that the road passes from the national capital through all the intervening state capitals—Richmond, Va.; Raleigh, N. C.; Columbia, S. C., and to Atlanta, and also passes the greatest memorial in the country—the mammoth monument to the Confederacy on Stone mountain.

SUPREME COURT RULES ON PRIVATE CARRIER

Washington, January 12.—The states have no authority to compel a private carrier by motor vehicle traffic to engage in public traffic for hire, the supreme court decided today in a case brought by the Michigan Public Utilities commission and others.

The question also was at issue before the court in cases brought from Maryland and Washington.

In an opinion delivered by Justice Butler, the court pointed out that the Duke Cartage company, which appealed for a ruling, was not using the public highways as a public carrier, but was engaged under private contract in carting automobile bodies from Detroit, Mich., to Toledo, Ohio, and declared that the state could not compel it to become a public carrier.

The regulations in question, if applied to a private carrier, would, the court stated, be a restraint upon interstate commerce.

GOLDEN'S DOG GETS HIM IN TROUBLE

A. Golden, 405 Central avenue, will face Recorder Callaway at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to explain why he permits a vicious dog to run at large.

Charges were preferred by John B. Hale, 862 Grant building, who declared that he had alighted from his automobile Sunday to protect a number of children from the dog, which was snapping and snarling as if mad. He also charged that he sought out the owner of the dog but could "get no satisfaction out of him," whereupon he appealed to police to "protect the neighborhood."

SPECIAL SESSION URGED BY BORAH

Washington, January 12.—While the president's agricultural commission continued today to wrestle with the problem of farm relief, Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, urged in the senate that there be an early extra session of the new congress to enact legislation dealing with the subject.

Calling attention that farm aid had been a predominant issue in the last campaign, the Idaho senator declared the problem confronting the country, if the farmers are to have any permanent relief, is the same as it was before election.

"I want to register my protest," he said, "against the proposition that agriculture has adjusted itself or will adjust itself in the near future."

Betterments in some lines of agriculture, he continued, have been due to two causes, the failure of crops in Europe and the Dawes reparations plan. He added, however, that the Dawes plan could not be of lasting benefit unless the amount of reparations to be paid by Germany is fixed at a definite sum.

Senator Borah also asserted that when the manufacturing interests of the country found themselves in distress, congress had been quick to enact a tariff law for their protection against foreign competition. There should be equal treatment, he insisted, for the farmer.

Tillman Urges Congress To Drop Liquor Charges

Washington, January 12.—Aroused by published charges of liquor drinking by members of congress, Representative Tillman, democrat, Arkansas, urged the house today not to dignify them by authorizing an investigation to determine their truth.

Grocers Are Warned Of Forged Checks On Warden's Office

Following discovery that a number of orders for groceries have been forged with the name of officials of the city warden's office, Miss Elizabeth Ivey, chief clerk in the office, Monday issued a warning to all grocers to be on the watch for such orders.

Orders for groceries and coal are issued at the office to help many needy families, but only after investigations have shown that the recipients are worthy. It is thought that forged orders were presented by persons whose applications for help had been found unworthy and refused.

Test Being Made Of Sanocrysin For Tuberculosis

Chicago, January 12.—Dr. Peter Clemensen, representative of the Chicago health department, who investigated sanocrysin, gold specific for tuberculosis, announced today on his return from Denmark that no patients will be treated in this country with sanocrysin until national health officials release it.

The American government is testing the specific at the national hygienic laboratory at Washington.

Editors of the journal of the American Medical association indicated that the association is waiting for the complete findings of the British Medical Research council, which has been investigating the specific. They said that almost yearly some new treatment was announced which raised hopes among patients "only to end in disappointment." They pointed out that Professor Holgar Moelgaardm, the originator, had himself been represented as "exceedingly reserved in his forecasts of the efficiency of sanocrysin."

Dr. Clemensen declared himself a believer in sanocrysin. He said that 40 per cent of 250 clinical cases in Denmark had been successful, and that many of the unsuccessful cases were far advanced before they were treated. Sanocrysin, he asserted, "is without the poisonous properties of the earlier gold cure."

EVERGLADE LAND DEALERS GUILTY; GIVEN BIG FINES

Chicago, January 12.—Four officials of the Everglade Land company, which in 1916 is said to have made many thousands of dollars in selling Florida land, today changed their pleas to guilty and were fined by Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe. They are William H. Otis, president, fined $2,500; Harold J. Bryant, vice president, fined $2,500; Percy A. Hagerman, vice president, fined $1,500, and William F. Greenwood, treasurer, fined $1,000.

The four were indicted in 1916 in connection with the frauds. They are alleged to have sold 35,000 acres of land in Palm Beach county, Florida. The land was under water.

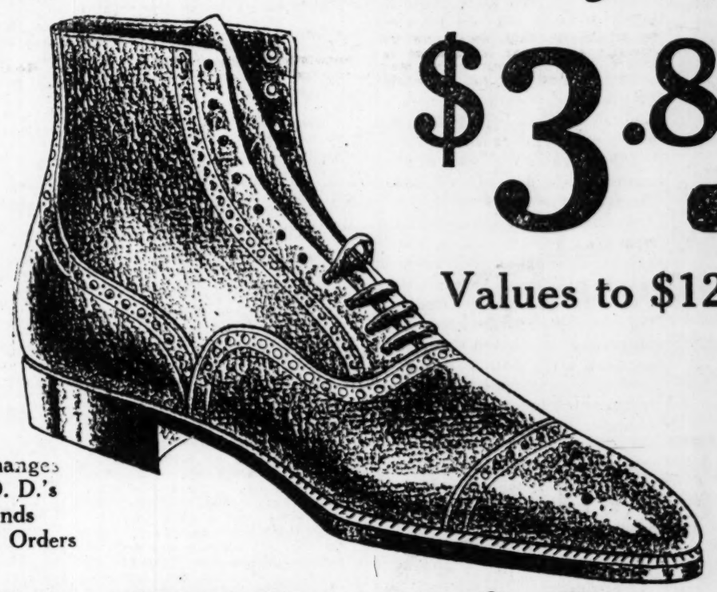

WILSON SARCOPHAGUS WORK SOON TO START

Washington, January 12.—Work on a permanent sarcophagus in Bethlehem chapel for the body of Woodrow Wilson will be begun at once, it was announced today at the national cathedral.

The tomb will be simple and dignified in character, consisting of the sarcophagus proper, a canopy and a grill.

The announcement settled reports that the war president's body might be removed from the cathedral where it now rests in a temporary tomb.

A BANQUET TRAGEDY.

The sudden death of Alex W. Smith, one of the leaders of the Atlanta bar, at the banquet given Monday evening at the Piedmont Driving club to the visiting members of the American Bar association, cast a gloom over the occasion and over the entire city of Atlanta.

As the news, released through the first edition of The Constitution, percolated through the city, the tragic ending of a great legal light, and an equally great factor in the civic life of Atlanta, gripped the people, regardless of caste or position, with a deep and an abiding sorrow.

"Alex Smith is dead," said the newsboy, and that was enough.

Everybody knew Alex Smith, not alone as a lawyer of outstanding ability, but as a civic leader of force, not only in the present but in the trying days when men's worth was measured by the actual good they accomplished for humanity.

Away back in 1895, 30 years ago, the searching mind there found Alex Smith as director general of the Cotton States and International exposition.

Subsequently he became president of the Atlanta, and then of the Georgia, Bar associations.

And then in the course of time, following the world war, he became special counsel to the director general of railroads, and a member of the standing committee on railroads, tariff and federal trade of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The news of the death of this distinguished Georgian and upstanding lawyer will carry genuine sorrow throughout the state of Georgia and the south.

That it should have occurred at the time it did, in the very presence of banquet levity, is one of those inexplainable things that are difficult to unravel in this world of mysteries.

It is enough to say that Alex Smith was one of Georgia's most distinguished and useful legal lights; and his sudden and tragic ending will call down a veil of sorrow in the homes of his native state, and throughout the south.

DEATH OF W. T. GENTRY.

There will be general sorrow at the news of the death of W. T. Gentry, whose life had been largely devoted to building to its present high efficiency one of the most potential of public utilities, the telephone service.

Beginning 45 years ago at the bottom of the ladder in his native state of Virginia, organizing at first a community line, he moved forward step by step until he became president of the great Southern Bell system, the phenomenal growth of which, from the day of its organization, was largely attributed to his force as an executive, and to his outstanding purpose to develop a public relations department by which a system of thorough and harmonious cooperation between the service and the patrons might be maintained at all times.

Five years ago, at the age of 65, he retired from the active direction of the company with the satisfaction of having contributed so signally to its development to a point where it had already become one of the great utility organizations of America.

Although weighted with the cares of a growing corporation reaching all points of the south, and serving tens of thousands of individual patrons, Colonel Gentry found time to devote much of his organization talents to civic interests, and his work for the Red Cross stands out especially as an unselfish service that will live in history.

His attractive personality and hearty fellowship were personal characteristics that gave him a wide circle of friends. In genuine usefulness as a constructive force for the upbuilding of the south, Colonel Gentry rendered invaluable service and his passing takes from Atlanta one of her most beloved citizens.

UNFAIR TO MOTORISTS.

In a communication on this page, A. H. Bailey, president of Bailey and company, incorporated, very strongly commends the new traffic boulevard law, but condemns the lack of proper intersection markers so that residents of Atlanta and visitors may know when they approach such boulevards, and that their requirement, under the law, is to come to a full stop before merging into boulevard traffice.

He is correct. The law is of itself an advanced step toward solving a most serious problem in Atlanta, that of traffic safety. But it is so unfair as at present enforced that it will, unless automobilists are speedily protected, create such a sentiment of rebellion that its good purposes will be destroyed.

In every other city in the country where traffic boulevards have been designated and given rights-of-way the public is protected with warning lights at night, and with large "stop" signals at each involved intersection. Mr. Bailey explains the methods for protecting the motorists in other cities.

In Atlanta there are no such warnings, and there are not a hundred citizens of the city, possibly, except taxi drivers, who know all of the intersections at which they may innocently violate the law. Certainly visitors in Atlanta do not know, and have no reason to know.

By all means the traffic boulevard law should be sustained and encouraged, and citizens should cooperative in its enforcement, but the city will be exacting a most unfair cooperation unless it does its part in properly marking every corner where a violation may occur.

When the law is sufficiently pointed out then a violator may be expected to pay, and pay a fine large enough to impress a proper respect for the law.

RYAN'S $10,000 GIFT.

General David C. Shanks, who has endeared himself to the citizens of Atlanta and the entire southeast during his residence here as commander of the fourth corps area, has just received a check for $10,000 from Thomas F. Ryan, of New York, for the Stone Mountain Memorial.

The announcement made by General Shanks, who is temporarily in Washington, will be received with keen appreciation by every person interested in this great undertaking to write in imperishable stone for all time the intrepid valor of the southern army.

Mr. Ryan is a Virginian, and his personal estimate of the work of Sculptor Borglum is best illustrated by his munificent donation.

Other men of the south of great wealth, it is believed, will follow the example of Mr. Ryan.

General Shanks, who will retire from the regular service on January 17, having reached the age limit, is to be congratulated. He has taken a keen interest in the completion of this, the supreme monument of all history, and it is hoped that he may continue his residence in Atlanta after retirement and become actively interested in carrying this most commendable undertaking to its utmost conclusion.

It is announced that the 5,000,000 memorial half-dollar coins will shortly be out of the mint, and it seems assured now that the Stone Mountain memorial will be completed, in accordance in detail with the original plans, in the time limit originally prescribed.

CHANCELLOR BARROW.

The announcement that Chancellor David C. Barrow—"Uncle Dave" as he is affectionately known by thousands throughout Georgia and the south—will retire at the end of the school year from the active duties of that position, which he has so long and honorably held at the university, will not occasion any great surprise, for he has well earned the vacation he seeks, but it will occasion a quickened feeling of a state-wide devotion for him, and bring from thousands of hearts a sincere good wish for a full measure of happiness in the sunset of a life of upstanding usefulness.

That Chancellor Barrow will be made chancellor emeritus is assured, and he will continue to live in the environ of the great institution he has helped so splendidly to build, and continue to inspire with his presence, his encouragement and his wonderful personal influence upon young men the student personnel of that great institution.

Since 1878 he has been connected with the university faculty, and for nearly 19 years—since 1906—as chancellor.

Four years prior to his entry into the faculty he graduated from the university. Therefore as student and teacher he has been associated with the institution for a half century.

The University of Georgia never had a chancellor more warmly beloved by everybody. He has made a strong, constructive executive, and under his administration it has grown, despite inadequate state support, to a place as one of the south's leading universities.

Life in the Country.

(As the Editor of the Dahlonega Nugget Sees It.)

A visitor got a little out of order and was given access to the city's rest room. He lives high up in the mountains. There he can get up on the highest peak, with a jug, drink as much as he pleases and yell at the top of his voice without disturbing anyone. But it is diffe ent here.

There is a lot more drinking now than used to be, and more persons drink it than did before they began making sugar liquor. It is like any new style or habit that starts up. Just like thousands of people who use tobacco. The first chew they took wasn't good and made them sick, but just kept on till they couldn't quit it. So it is with sugar liquor.

Last week we received that old letter purporting to be written by the Savior and hid under a rock while he was here on earth. We saw this printed letter many years ago which has been sent us several times since. It has always been thrown into the waste basket. We have not seen the Lord, and may never, but feel confident that he has better judgment than to write a letter and hide it under a rock.

For many long years the timber grew up on the hills and mountains and in the hollows of Lumpkin county undisturbed because the natives didn't know how to get it to the mills, mattered not how bad they needed it. But of late years men with capital have come in, built railroads through the mountains and with experienced laborers and trained horses have stripped the steepest mountains of all their valuable timber and placed it on the railroad and from there conveyed it to the sawmills. While in deep hollows where stock cannot be gotten the block and tackle are used. No valuable tree for lumber can escape now, no matter how large it is or where it grows.

"Between Two Fires."

Evidently the Crane Chronicle is not after a job "on the force." It says:

"The way of the transgressor is hard we are told, and we might remark that the way of the one who apprehends the transgressor is also hard. It's a queer thing, but an officer is about the most unpopular man there is. If he enforces the law he gets cussed, and if he doesn't he is cussed. Any officer who takes the obligation of law enforcement on himself ought to work at the job regardless of the cussing, and the community ought to quit its cussing and stay with him. We need officers who will enforce the law and unless such positions are made less unpopular good men will not accept them."

Long Time Between Marrying.

Editor Townsend is the ordinary of Lumpkin county, and issues the marriage licenses. Business probably was dull when he wrote this:

"Some boys and girls court a long time before marrying. A lot of times it is caused by the girl hesitating in saying 'yes,' because she is confident that when she does she will afterwards get but few auto rides and no two or three boxes of candy will come her way."

Today's Talk

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THIS BEAUTIFUL WORLD.

Life is more than a "lovely adventure" as some would have it. It is a serious proposition to most of us in which we reach into the very dregs of all experience that we may rise strong for any daily task.

Withal this world is a very beautiful place. And the more one has gone through pain and suffering drunk from the bitter cup of disappointment and loss, the more is all beauty loved and appreciated.

To me the two most beautiful things in this world are a beautiful soul and a beautiful flower.

If my wisdom was a hundred times more than it is and my experience over the earth also a hundred times as vast as it is now, I would still marvel at the beauty of flowers.

It does seem as though flowers were the visible expressions of God's thoughts planted here and there and everywhere, so that everybody might see and love and learn.

No matter where you see beauty, be it the exquisite carving in a piece of furniture, the delicate tooling and placing of leathers in a hand-bound book, the studied colors of a picture or the natural blending of beauty in a sunset—it is the same, always inspiring and full of the good that makes this world a place in which men are able to be brave.

Our characters are shaped by our view point. And if we have vision we can see right over the unpleasant and sordid and shape our minds and hearts so that our feet may lead us into pleasant and happy paths.

We must look for beauty, however. It is everywhere. And the more we look for it the more we are sure to have it.

$300,000 a Day for Bread We Don't Get

BY ARTHUR CAPPER,
Senator From Kansas and a Famous Publisher.

Senator Capper, who introduced in the senate the bill now pending in congress to establish uniform weights and measures, speaks with authority when he analyzes the bread trade from the point of view of consumer and of producer with a view to giving the consumer what he pays for and the producers their legitimate profit.

Short weight selling by the big fellows in the baking trade costs the consumers $300,000 a day for bread which he pays for but does not get and creates a condition that the uniform weights and standards bill now pending in congress is designed to correct. A contributing factor to the situation is the absence in some states of regulations to protect the consumer from such profiteering.

Such regulation as this legislation contemplates cannot work a hardship upon legitimate profits of the baking industry. It cannot afford a defensible excuse for increasing the price of bread to the consumer. This is a vital phase of the matter. The consumer is now paying dear for his loaf in comparison with prices that obtain in European countries, though Europe is dependent on foreign wheat.

While not all bakers practice short-weight selling, charging full prices for a "short" loaf, evidence is that the practice is general among large baking corporations where state laws fixing a standard of bread weights do not prohibit.

Bakeries now produce approximately 60,000,000 loaves a day. At an average price of 8 cents for the "pound" loaf this production is sold to the consumer for $4,800,000 a day. If all bakers sold "short weight"—a 12-ounce for a 16, or a 20-ounce for a 24—the total gouge would be some $600,000 each day. But some of the states have regulatory laws fixing weight standards and practically all the small bakers sell "full weight." So, it is estimated, the amount the consumer pays for what he doesn't get is cut in half. This fixes the total daily gouge at $300,000.

During recent years the baking industry has grown to a degree that baker's bread is now the reliance of the consumer for this essential staple. Baker's bread has become a big item in interstate commerce. This makes bread marketing an entirely legitimate subject for federal inquiry and regulation, prescribing uniform weights and standards to protect the consumer against short-weight profiteering.

Moreover, baking has become a great national industry, increasingly in the control of great corporations, it reached a climax recently in the organization of a huge merger, with an authorized capitalization of $600,000,000.

The department of justice and the federal trade commission are now investigating this big consolidation. These investigations are undertaken to determine the probable effect of such a merger. Will such a combination tend to result in a monopoly control of the consumer's bread supply by crushing out the competition of the small, independent bakers? The investigations seek the answer.

Fascism's Victory.

Fascismo has triumphed and it was an easy victory. More labor halls lie in ashes, more liberal newspaper editors are in jail, machine guns dominate the central thoroughfares in Italian cities and the mobs of blackshirt bandits shout again "Evivva il Duce!" There was little resistance because the opponents of fascism are also opposed to violence. An observer writing from the Eternal City says that the fascisti after all have dealt leniently with their opponents. "Revolutions are based upon force and the fascist revolution, instead of lining its enemies against the wall and shooting them, allowed them their freedom," he writes. As a matter of fact, Mussolini could have ill afforded to shoot the liberal and other antifascist leaders, because he announced at the outset of his seizure of the government that his move was to consolidate the national life and give it direction in purely democratic channels. For a time he would establish a dictatorship, but without terrorism, and later he intended to return to a parliamentary form of government. Those were his declarations. He did not assume the role of a revolutionist, but that of a savior of established institutions. Within a month after his first coup, the communist danger had disappeared. The liberals constituted no danger to the safety of the fatherland. They waited quietly for the time when the crisis should have passed and the country could return to a civilized procedure of administration. But Mussolini, having tasted power, did not seem anxious to relinquish the position of dictator. The liberals became insistent. He bullied them and threatened them. They refrained from participation in the debates in the chamber. Mussolini was helpless. For the liberals unmasked the true character of fascism as a force of blackest reaction that craved the fleshpots of office even after the danger of a red revolt had passed, for the red menace was the "raison d'etre" of fascism. Its usefulness has now disappeared. Mussolini is as despotic as the scarlet triumvirate of Moscow.

A Chief.

How did the story of Hercules and the three-headed monster Cerberus at the entrance of Hades stagger the youthful imagination? What strength, what daring right at the mouth of the eerie underworld! Yet from British East Africa comes a news dispatch with the story of a native chief who braved a blazing and spitting leopard bare-handed. Hercules' story after all is but mythology, but Murigo wa Trimu's is reality. Leopards had been raiding the kraals. Several of the chief's subects had been killed. One morning the alarm was given and Trimu, seven feet tall and a giant in strength, ran from his hut, and seeing the leopard mauling two natives, tackled him with his bare hands and tore him to pieces. The natives of British East Africa apparently exercise due common sense when they elect their chiefs.

Red Tape A la Prussia.

The Germans have restored the slot machines in Berlin, where one may buy a world classic for thirty pfennigs. It took years of stabilization of the currency to restore the book firm's confidence, but at last it has come. The contraption consists of a tall case with glass front, behind the glass rows of books, each with a number underneath. The buyer drops his coin in the slot, turns the handle to the required number and presses the lever and he has the book. In this manner the studious-minded Berliner may keep in touch with world literature. It's a different matter at the National Bibliothek (library). Here one must fill out identification cards and show passports. An American married woman applied, writes a Philadelphia paper's representative, for an admission card and was asked her profession. "Housewife," she answered. "Rejected," snapped the official. "Must have a profession," he finished.

Attack on Russia.

Grand Duke Nicholas is said to be planning an armed expedition against the soviets. It is rumored he will be backed by France, Poland and Rumania. And the possibility exists that the mobilization center of the anti-bolshevik army will be located in Bavaria. It's not the grand duke himself who is giving out this information, but his cousin, the Grand Duke Cyril, who claims also to be the rightful pretender to the throne of the Romanoffs. Cyril is doing his best to counteract any influence his uncle may have in Europe and does not seem to hesitate at the most flamboyant illusionary predictions. There is in reality not the faintest hope for such a combined attack on the soviet government and Nicholas, being a rather shrewd person, would be the last man to be drawn into a fantastic scheme in which he would have to go campaigning with unsufficient forces and equipment. For even if France and other countries should support him, this support would be unofficial and mostly moral. Grand Duke Nicholas is an experienced strategist. He knows that with moral French or Rumanian support, he will accomplish very little against the massed battalions and the steel of the red army. In the meantime the more the grand dukes quarrel and slander each other, the better the gentlemen in Moscow are pleased.

Truly Imperial Dream.

Hsuan-Tung, the boy emperor of China, who recently took refuge in the Japanese legation, has no ambition to reenter the imperial palace, his former home. He refers to it as a "cage and a prison." How different from the ambitions of dethroned monarchs in Europe, where Bourbons, Gothas, Hapsburgs, Romanoffs and Hohenzollerns are hankering for a chance to go back to the castles of their ancestors. But Hsuan-Tung has other ambitions. He is described as a scholar and a sage and his ambition in life is to take a group of scientists and philologists to the four imperial libraries of China and commence translation, coordination and publication in modern languages the great treasures of Chinese ancient literature. The young man does not want to start out on the venture with a view to reaping financial benefits, but to enrich the world with a collection of true pictures of ancient Chinese and Mongolian civilization and authentic versions of the classic philosophies of the country. He has declared over and over again that he has no ambition to enter the army. His heart is set on the pursuit of learning. He does not mourn the loss of an empire, for in the realms of science there are mighty empires to be conquered.

Says Street Car Problem Should Be Settled Promptly

Editor Constitution: I believe the people of Atlanta approve a recent editorial in The Constitution calling for early councilmanic action on the petition of the Georgia Railway and Power company for relief. You are correct in urging council to settle the pending issue fairly and without prejudice to the power company.

Nothing could be more prejudicial to the public weal than the submission of this question to a vote of the people. Nothing could be more subversive of legislative prerogative, and nothing more inconsistent with past assumed rights of the council.

To say that council had the right to license the jitney bus, which the present body did, and later to contend that the question of whether this license should be continued or discontinued is not for the council but for the people to settle, is too untenable to argue.

The people elected the council to sit in judgment on such matters, and they will not look with favor upon any dodging, side-stepping policy born of a desire to shift responsibility.

The issue is clear. Will Atlanta permit further bloodsucking of vested franchise rights and thus invite abandonment of her thoroughfares by a bankrupt street railway system?

DeSales Harrison To Address Meeting Of Theater Division

DeSales Harrison, Atlanta representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., will address the second annual convention of the theater division of Famous Players-Lasky corporation at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel next week.

Mr. Harrison's address, which is scheduled for the Thursday morning session of division managers and theater managers will be on the subject of "Public Relations." Harold B. Franklin, director of theaters; Jesse L. Lasky, vice president; A. M. Botsford, advertising manager; Eugene Zukor, assistant to the president, and other high officials of Famous Players also will attend the conference here.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, musical director of the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theaters in New York, will speak on "Applied Music."

Georgia Might Profit by North Carolina's Example

BY SAM W. SMALL.

En route to Florida by motor I stopped Tuesday evening in Raleigh to rest over night, and found it was the eve of the assembling of the North Carolina legislature. The lobby of the hotel was crowded with old and new solons and each of them seemed a magnet for an all-too-obvious crowd of candidates for the secretational job about the two chambers of the general assembly.

Those "Hungry Joes" were of the usual type. I could easily figure myself in the Kimball house lobby in Atlanta the night before the organization of the Georgia legislature. Each of the cormorants had his special "entitlements" to a soft and fat place at the public trough. Every one that I heard explaining his case had "saved the state" in his particular bailiwick in the recent election. But for his smart and active strategy, he would have you believe, "the star that glitters in the national galaxy in the name of North Carolina" would have been blackened with a republican victory and the democracy of Zeb Vance and Josephus Daniels suffered a probably perpetual eclipse!

Yet such is life on the high seas of politics. But, on the side, there was an earnest protest from some of the legislators that the payroll of the general assembly is extravagantly overloaded with these sessional cooties.

An Impressive Body.

These tar-heel legislators make up a most impressive body. They have the marks of serious concern for the welfare and progress of the state. Most of them carry the confidence and poise of common sense and business ability. The "man of affairs" is conspicuous among them and appears to be of the majority. They talk in terms of patriotic progressivism and no echo of picayunish demagogism is heard among them. They speak of the state as one that is rich in resources, ambitious to be a leader in civic progress, in moral reforms and in social humanities. Their slogan seems to be "whatever North Carolina ought to do she is abundantly able and willing to do!"

That is the spirit that makes a state great, attractive and prosperous. That is the spirit that is rapidly advancing North Carolina to the commonwealth primacy of the "New and Greater South."

Brains and Roads.

The two uppermost subjects that I heard discussed were education and the completion of the already splendid highway system of the state. The state's percentage of illiteracy is being reduced and the public sentiment is that it shall be brought to the irreducible minimum by whatever expenditures are necessary to that end. These legislators, I found, are not asking "how little" shall the schools be given, but "how much" can we find for them?

A Bunch of Millions.

Experience has proven to these people that good roads pay big and increasing dividends to the state's general prosperity. The highway authorities have already spent the $65,000,000 raised by bond issues and now the question to be decided at the present session of the legislature is whether to make the next and immediate issue $20,000,000 or the full $35,000,000 calculated to complete the comprehensive state system.

Think of that! Here is a state in the south almost joyously putting a hundred millions or dollars under the wheels of her chariots of progress! But don't, for heaven's sake, tell it to our Georgia solons. There are too many heart-failure deaths in the state as it is.

Commends Boulevard Law But Declares It Unfair Not To Mark the Corners

Editor Constitution: The boulevard law in Atlanta marks one of the many steps our city must take to simplify the transportation problem and at the same time speed up traffic. Similar laws have proven practicable in all large cities, and this law in Atlanta will undoubtedly prove its practicability and be extended to more streets.

Our city government, however, has made the law without providing the customary safeguards that accompany similar laws in every city in the country, and as matters stand at present, this law is painfully unfair to the public without these safeguards.

I have never before seen any right-of-way boulevard in any city that was not protected by both signs and lights up in the air, clear of traffic and clearly visible for several blocks away. In Chicago, for example, the boulevard "Stop!" sign is shield-shape, about 3 feet high and 2 feet wide, painted in bright colors, illuminated with a brilliant white light at night and carrying a strong red semaphore lens at least 6 inches in diameter.

In Atlanta there is no warning light at any boulevard intersection, nor is there a vertical line in the day time. The only sign, if such it can be called, is painted on the pavement where it is washed off by rain and scrubbed off by tires, until all of them are practically invisible if they have been in place for a day and a half. Even if they were painted fresh every night they would still be grossly unfair, because on the pavement in front of his car is the last place a careful driver should be looking, especially when approaching a corner.

If this town is going to have a boulevard law, and we hope it is, won't you let me urge you to plead that we give the automobile driver, and especially the one from out-of-town, a fair chance to obey the law by erecting signs that really constitute fair warning.

SUTTON WILL DISCUSS EUROPEAN CONDITIONS

BITS OF SOUTHERN LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

Atlanta.—Atlanta, I have been told, is the New York of the south. That might be a fine trade last but it is not quite fair to this southern metropolis. So far no one has stepped on my feet, pushed me off the sidewalk, snatched my hat or run me down with a taxicab.

Unless those things happen in 24 hours in New York we do not call it a day. So then Atlanta is a miniature New York minus the rough stuff. Nobody knows I am in New York and they wouldn't give a hoot in Hoboken if they did.

But they knew it in Atlanta two hours after my arrival and I was swept off my feet by a rush of southern hospitality. Dinners, luncheons, teas and what not. The privileges of the leading clubs. Offers of limousines for the day and so on.

Six hours after my arrival came a telegraphic invitation to attend a dinner in my honor at Griffin, Ga. Also one from Columbus and Americus. If I am giving the idea of self-importance I don't mean to. I was not especially favored. They treat visitors that way.

And that is why every northerner who comes here goes back home with a sentimental feeling for the south that is not engendered anywhere else in the world. There is somehow an absence of pose down here. You find the same feeling in Texas—a feeling that they are "just folks."

Where save in the south would a telephone girl at a hotel inquire after your health at the first call of the morning? "Number" and "Excuse it please" constitute the New York telephone girl's lexicon. It might be argued that in New York they are too busy.

The south proves that no one needs be too busy to be pleasant and cordial. A mighty city has sprung up here and good manners and consideration for others have been preserved. It can be done anywhere else and add greatly to the sum total of human happiness.

Peachtree street is Atlanta's Bois de Bologne. Here are fine old colonial homes with broad expanse of closely clipped lawns—and inviting shiny brass knockers. It has a rare dignity. You somehow look for curtseying ladies in crinolines, gentlemen in stocks and goatees, the family coach and a faithful old darkey serving mint juleps. A few stretches of it have been ravaged by every city's mighty Moloch—the ornate apartment house. But generally speaking, it retains its virginal charm of hallowed days that are gone.

The Atlanta Constitution is one of the oldest papers in America. It was founded in the fifties. It has many traditions, and this spirit seems to have welded a traditional spirit among those who make it. I had a jolly time there for the print shop will always remain to me the most romantic spot in the world. We sat about the office of Clark Howell, the owner. Printers, press feeders, make-up men, circulation men, reporters and editors came in. Each seemed on an equal footing with the chief. I have rarely seen such an interesting and happy newspaper family. I don't believe there are many orders given around the Constitution office, for the simple reason that the employees don't need orders.

Atlanta has long been the hotbed of the Ku Klux Klan. People have grown used to it or don't care to discuss it. You hear more of the Klan in New York than here. I saw the factory where 60-cent sheets become $4 robes of mystery. It was blazing with light at night. I also saw the imperial palace, a rather imposing building of colonial design. On the porch there sits constantly a corpulent, puffy and rather jovial appearing old fellow. He wears a wide soft hat and suggests the inn keeper of the English countryside. So far as I could see his job consisted only in lowering the American flag as the sun goes down.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

UNEDUCATED FEET.

Among about 9,000 children from 6 to 16 years of age in schools in South Carolina, Maryland, Delaware and New York whose eyesight was tested with the snellen test types, 6,000 were found to be normal or better in both eyes, about 2,000 had moderate defects of vision, and 900 had poor vision in one or both eyes. Only about one in four of the children with poor vision in both eyes were wearing glasses. But whether the vision was good or bad, it was generally as good in the right eye as it was in the left. Most of us have two eyes, and we use them both. Most of us hear as well with the left ear as we do with the right; 4 per cent have two good hands and educate only the right. Nearly all of us have two potentially useful feet, but we're so darned ignorant from the eyebrows down that we laugh outright at the very notion of educating the feet. The neglect of this feature of our physical education costs us a pretty penny, too. Fortunately, the defects of the feet which are preventable by education given more or less discomfort, pain or disability which even the dumbest of us must heed. The defects of vision among the children referred to above give little discomfort or pain and hence are commonly unsuspected—the children are considered backward or dull or wayward. Unnecessary to suggest that irritability or peevishness may arise from defective feet—the quack shoe merchants and propagandists exploit that idea to the disadvantage of the credulous.

When a man with a broken leg wishes to get about he uses crutches. But he generally does so under the advice and care of a physician. Arch supports proper, or footwear purporting to support the arch in any way are crutches, but the average uninformed person imagines it is all right to adopt such crutches on the advice of any shoe salesman with the glib manner.

One of the outstanding features of uneducated feet is bunion. A bunion stands out like a sore thumb. In the last 10 years, thanks to the smatterings of education our feet are beginning to receive, this condition has decreased markedly in prevalence. The recent tendency in footwear vogue has been along the natural anatomical line which the hygienists have been urging upon us these many years. Under this healthful reform, not only bunion, but many other painful or disabling foot ailments are destined to approach the vanishing point. A great many victims of bunion do not even know what bunion is; they think it is a kind of large or hospital size corn, and sometimes they make the mistake of treating it accordingly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

More Wanted.

I have a rupture and have been wearing a truss to support it fairly comfortably. I am now being deluged with letters and circulars from a concern claiming to permanently cure any rupture with their adhesive pad and salve, through the strengthening of the muscles by absorption of the salve through the skin.—(D. H. J.)

Answer—Nothing will cure rupture (hernia, breech) in a person over two years old, except operation. Let me remind you that no salve, ointment or other substance is absorbed through the skin in any circumstances. And even if anything could be absorbed through the skin, isn't it foolish to imagine that a medicament will correct a mechanical defect?

Movie Magazine Lore.

Will olive oil make the eyelashes thick and long, or is it better to use . . . which is claimed to grow beautiful lashes?—(C. E.)

Answer—Ho hum, my child, you shouldn't take the movie magazines so seriously. Nothing you can apply will affect the growth of your eyelashes. Grease or gum of one kind or another may make the eyelashes appear heavier or longer in a makeup or a picture, but we haven't even found anything that will make the hair grow long and thick yet, much less the eyelashes.

Modern Education.

Can you tell me if it is bad for me to smoke a cigarette about once a day? I am 12 years old.—(P. A. B.)

Answer—Yes.

Write for Advice.

Please tell me what to do for a boy 12 years old to keep him from bedwetting.—(Mrs. S.)

Answer—Accompany a request for individual advice of that kind with a stamped self addressed envelope and I will send advice by mail, if I have any which suites the need.

How to Strengthen the Voice.

Could you please give me some suggestions for strengthening my voice for speaking purposes. I have to make a visible effort to speak loud and distinct.—(P. K.)

Answer—Practice speaking aloud.

BOARD WILL ASK NEW LOCKER BIDS

Following decision in Fulton superior court by Judge W. D. Ellis, that a contract between the board of education and the Foote & Davies company, of Atlanta, to supply steel lockers to the new Girls' High school was illegal because John T. Hancock, president of the board, is a stockholder in the company, officials of the board Monday announced that advertisements for new bids would be made at once.

Judge Ellis granted an injunction restraining the board from consummation of the contract with the Foote & Davies company.

The contract was illegal, Judge Ellis ruled in his opinion Monday morning, "notwithstanding that no bad faith was intended and notwithstanding that the contract may have been to the advantage of the board of education." The injunction was issued upon application of Carl F. Hutcheson, Atlanta attorney. Mr. Hancock's connection with the Foote & Davies company, the successful bidder and the charge that the bid was not received until 30 minutes after the prescribed time limit for bids, were the chief grounds on which the contract was assailed.

Judge Ellis ruled that Mr. Hancock's connection with the successful bidder made the contract a violation of the city laws. The injunction was granted until "further order of this court."

Mr. Hutcheson was represented by his law firm, Hutcheson & Morris and Harry Lee McGriff. W. W. Gaines, former president of the board, appeared for the board of education. The latter contended that Mr. Hancock's holdings in the Foote & Davies company were small and that he had no connection with making the contract, which was let by a subcommittee.

WHITMAN WILL SPEAK TO ROTARIANS TODAY

Charles S. Whitman, former governor of New York, will be principal speaker at a meeting of the Rotary club at 12:30 o'clock today at the Capital City club.

Former Governor Whitman is attending the meetings of the American Bar association and has been invited to the luncheon as the guest of honor and also to address the members.

The program will be in charge of H. M. Hudson, chairman of the entertainment committee. A fine musical program has been arranged.

Boifeuillet- Bennett Are Still Occupying Same Capitol Office

There were no over week-end developments in the Bennett-Boifeuillet case, in which O. R. Bennett of Eastman, and John T. Boifeuillet, of Atlanta, both claim the same seat as a member of the public service commission, it was reported Monday at the commission's offices.

Commissioner Boifeuillet, who, by decision of a majority of the other members of the commission and by an opinion rendered by the attorney for the commission, is held to be the properly qualified commissioner, transacted his business at his office in his customary manner. Mr. Bennett also was at the offices during the day, but stated that he had nothing to say, his claims in the matter being entirely in the hands of his lawyers, John T. Bennett, of Waycross and J. Herman Millner, of Eastman.

The dispute arose over a claim by Commissioner Boifeuillet that his term of office does not expire until December 1, 1925, while Mr. Bennett contends that it expired on January 1 and that he—the successful candidate in the election of last fall—now rightfully holds the office.

CHARLES F. TAYLOR TO LECTURE TONIGHT

Charles F. Taylor, a noted lecturer of New York, will make an address at the Central Congregational church at 8 o'clock tonight on "The New Technique for Solving Problems."

Mr. Taylor will be in Atlanta all the week and will lecture at the church every night. A large congregation attended his first address Sunday night, "Jesus, the Master Psychologist," being the subject. Monday night he spoke on "The New Dynamic Psychologist."

Both lectures are along the lines of a modern survey of the recent discoveries and developments in psychology.

Despite Cabinet Shake-Up, Coolidge's Foreign Policy To Remain Without Change

President Will Turn No Somersaults After March 4 in Relations With Foreign Nations.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

(Cpyright, 1925, by United News.)

Washington, January 12.—President Coolidge intends to adhere to the same foreign policies which have prevailed heretofore, despite the cabinet shake-up, according to the best information obtainable.

From a well-informed source, it is stated that there is nothing imminent in the way of a change in the Russian policy. It has always been the supposition that, in time, the soviet government would be recognized. But there is no more inclination now to force the issue than there has been in the past. The foremost champion of Russian recognition—Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee—declines to discuss foreign issues for publication, but it is understood that he has no intention of raising the Russian question at this session of cogress.

Leaned Toward Borah.

President Coolidge has leaned toward Borah rather than Hughes on this issue for more than a year, and in time the president and his senate chairman may be expected to work out a policy. But nothing is expected for some time, and there is no information to indicate this was the reason that Hughes resigned, despite general speculation in that direction.

The capital is just coming out of a 48-hour brainstorm over the twin sensations of the Hughes resignation and the appointment of Ambassador Kellogg to succeed him. It is hard to say which event surprised the capital most.

In the excitement a good many wild guesses have been made as to what the change portends. But President Coolidge has no intention of turning a political somersault on the fourth day of March. He will run along in about the same sort of character which he has displayed during his quarter century in public life.

Bear More Responsibility.

The retirement of Hughes does mean that the president will have to bear more responsibility in attending to foreign affairs than before. He will, in the Wilsonian sense, be his own secretary of state, whereas things have in the past been left pretty much to Hughes.

But this means a mechanical change rather than any significant changes in policies, except as changes naturally occur in the process of evolving conditions, for Coolidge and Hughes were in accord on most questions.

"Foreign policies are stable with any responsible nation. Though they serve as a convenient football for a good deal of hot air during political campaigns, the actual fact is that foreign policies change but little from one administration to another.

After the senate rejected the treaty of Versailles, the Wilson administration devised a policy to fit that situation and the Harding administration carried it on through in all the major essentials. Foreign policies cannot fluctuate with the winds without jeopardizing a nation's standing abroad. Other powers expect nations with whom they have dealings to be consistent and as a rule they are.

Chart No New Courses.

So, while the natural disposition at the moment is to assume that President Coolidge is going to set out on a new course, this will not be the case. President Coolidge has been in control of foreign policies for a year and a half. As president of the United States he has been just as responsible for the wise conduct of those policies during that time as if he had been serving an elected term. The idea that he has been following policies which he regards as unwise and that he is now about to throw off his disguise and be another Coolidge with a new set of policies fails to square with the temperament of the man, as those who have observed him in Washington know it to be.

This same question came up just after election, when it was also widely stated that he would soon be president "in his own right" and embark upon new policies. At that time the white house authorized the statement that the president had been acting as naturally as he could all the time and did not intend to assume any new character in the future. His idea, as expressed at that time, is that government policies are slowly evolving things and that they must constantly be readjusted to meet constantly changing conditions. But beyond this necessary flexibility the president had no new plans in mind.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the nauseless Calomel tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calotabs at bed time with a swallow of water,—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommend and guaranteed by druggists. Coughs Always Dangerous—Quick Way to Stop Them

Chronic coughs and chest colds often lead to more serious trouble. Not only is the infection itself dangerous, but the continual coughing spells day and night so weaken your entire system that you can no longer fight off disease.

So stop a cough the quickest you can. To do this there is nothing better than that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar extract to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. The quick relief to the stubbornest cough often seems almost magical.

But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original pine-tar honey and has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic croup. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only 50c at any good druggists.

BARROW RESIGNS POST AT GEORGIA

Athens, Ga., January 12.—In a letter addressed to Judge Richard B. Russell, chairman of the board of trustees of Georgia university, Chancellor

DAVID C. BARROW.

David C. Barrow, of that institution, makes known his desire to resign from that seat at the end of the present scholastic term. The chancellor cites "failing health" as the reason for his action.

It has been rumored here for the last two months that the chancellor, who is 73 years old, seriously considered turning in his resignation to the trustees. It is expected that the trustees will name him chancellor emeritus of the institution, if his resignation is accepted.

On two other occasions Chancellor Barrow has offered his resignation to the trustees, and they have refused to act upon it, he being urged to reconsider his action. Chancellor Barrow feels that he should step down, according to his letter, and that a younger man should fill his place.

RUSSELL TO URGE RECONSIDERATION.

In commenting on the resignation of Chancellor Barrow, which he received under the date of November 10, Judge Richard B. Russell, chairman of the board of trustees of Georgia, stated to the Associated Press today that he was of the opinion that Chancellor Barrow would reconsider before resigning.

When asked if he had received a letter from the chancellor in which he resigned, Judge Russell replied that he had, but that he felt he was not at liberty to make that letter public.

Judge Russell stated that he did not consider the letter from the chancellor as a resignation, but that he simply was giving him notice of such course as he will pursue.

"You remember that Chancellor Barrow has twice 'resigned' on previous occasions, but was prevailed upon by the whole board to reconsider his action," said Judge Russell. "I feel that he will again do this in regard to his present intention of resigning.

"He is, I believe, the most valuable man I consider the University of Georgia has, and the board of trustees has taken that position on two other occasions when he felt that he should resign. I do not consider this letter to me, addressed as it is and in his own handwriting, as an unequivocal resignation."

Concerning the calling of a special meeting of the trustees to consider the resignation of Chancellor Barrow, Judge Russell said:

"You can say that the board of trustees will not meet until after I have personally conferred with the chancellor over the matter, and I can't say when that will be."

DARTMOUTH ALUMNI PLAN 'DIXIE' DINNER

Alumni of Dartmouth college, residing in the southeastern states, will meet in Atlanta on April 3, for a big "Dartmouth in Dixie Dinner." According to Allan G. Gottschaldt, president of the Southeastern Alumni association of the old New England institution, graduates from Georgia, the two Carolinas, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and Tennessee will be in attendance.

Ernest Martin Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college, will in all likelihood be the principal speaker at this gathering and while he is in the city, it is possible that he will make one or two other addresses. The "Big Green" baseball team will be here at the same time on its annual spring training trip and the entire squad will be guests at the dinner and "smoker" that will follow.

The alumni will stay over the week-end, according to present plans, and will be entertained at the Dartmouth-Georgia Tech baseball game on Saturday, April 4, and will be taken on a trip to the Stone Mountain Memorial, Sunday, April 5.

Committees to arrange details of the Dartmouth gathering will be appointed at the next luncheon meeting of the local club, to be held Friday, January 16, at the Ansley hotel.

ELECTRIC CHAIR REPLACES NOOSE

Washington, January 12.—A senate bill, which would substitute death by electrocution for hanging as the punishment for capital crimes in the District of Columbia, was passed today by the house.

Skies To Clear This Afternoon, Says Forecaster

After almost two weeks of steady rain, Atlanta may expect a return of clear weather by this afternoon Forecaster C. F. von Herrmann stated Monday.

Rain and cooler is the official prediction for the day, but the prognosticator explained that the rain probably would come during the early part of the day. The temperature on Monday ranged between 38 and 46 degrees. With a drop in temperature due Tuesday afternoon, the freezing point is probable for Wednesday morning.

Heavy rains of the recent weeks have brought all rivers in Georgia to the flood stage and the local office has sent out additional flood warnings for the Chattahoochee and Flint rivers.

MRS. ESTHER BRADLEY DIES MONDAY MORNING

Funeral services for Mrs. Esther Constance Bradley, 77, widow of the late Joseph S. Bradley, of Philadelphia, who died at her home here Monday morning, will be held at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon, Rev. James G. Patton, Jr., officiating. The body will be taken to Newnan for interment Wednesday.

She is survived by three nieces, Mrs. N. J. Newsome, of Sandersville, Ga.; Misses Emms and Lily Adams, of West Point, Ga., and three nephews, Frank L. Stevens, of Newnan; Danna Stevens, of La Fla, Md., and Charles H. Adams, of Tampa, Fla.

MARCUSON TO ATTEND ST. LOUIS CONVENTION

Macon, Ga., January 12.—(Special) Rabbi I. E. Marcuson, of Temple Beth Israel, this city, will attend the 26th biennial federation of Temple sisterhoods and the national federation of Temple brotherhoods in St. Louis, January 18 to 22, it was learned last night.

Atlanta Clothiers Plan To Entertain Convention

Formulation of plans for the elaborate entertainment of the Georgia Retail Clothiers' and Furnishers' association, which meets here for its annual convention February 24-25, was was begun Monday night at an enthusiastic meeting of local members at the Ansley hotel. The meeting followed a splendid dinner in the main dining room.

Although more than two hours were devoted to discussion of the approaching convention, completion of plans was not made, due to the immense amount of work involved in the proposed elaborate entertainment. L. C. Adler, prominent Atlanta merchant, and president of the Georgia association, who presided over the meeting, expressed hope that the entire program would be completed and ready for announcement within a very few days. Several meetings of committees will be called this week, he said.

Mr. Adler urged local members to support the committees in their various tasks and expressed the belief that the convention would prove to be the greatest in the history of the Georgia association.

"We need every member to put his shoulder to the wheel and push," Mr. Adler said. "The splendid cooperation we have already received must not en dhere. It must continue until we have put the convention over and made it worth while to every member of the association."

Expenses In Hand.

Mr. Adler explained that the convention would be the first in the history of the association that "didn't cost anything." Funds for the entertainment have been obtained through subscriptions from twenty-eight or more manufacturers in the large, souvenir program which is being printed.

Mr. Adler also urged the members to put into use the slogan of the national association: "Dress Well and Succeed."

Those speaking at the meeting Monday night included B. S. Barker, executive secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Frank O. Foster, of the convention bureau; Aaron Cohen, of Athens, former president of the Georgia association and a national director; I. Lear, well known manufacturer, of Rochester, N. Y.; Henry Geigerman, of the Men's Apparel club, an organization of traveling men, affiliated with the association, and Morris Eilman, prominent Atlanta merchant and secretary of the association.

In his address, Mr. Cohen paid a tribute to the three Atlanta newspapers, declaring that the success that has come to Atlanta was due their "unselfish and constructive work."

Newspapers Praised.

"The Atlanta Constitution, The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Georgian," Mr. Cohen said, "have made Atlanta what it is today. You can talk all you want about the 'Atlanta spirit' because it is a fine thing. But without these three great institutions you could have gone nowhere."

Mr. Cohen also highly lauded Mr. Eilman and Mr. Adler for their untiring efforts in preparing for the convention, and urged that the entire local membership pledge their support.

The entertainment committee, announced by Mr. Adler Monday night, is composed of Henry Berg, chairman; Foster Law, A. L. Zachary, Jim Hale and Myer Goldsmith, all well known men in Atlanta clothing and furnishing circles.

Frak Stanton, Jr., was appointed chairman of the publicity committee.

The four principal speakers of the convention will be Tom Leslie, of Chicago, who will give some valuable and interesting suggestions on window dressing; Lawrence Ober, nationally known merchant, of Lawrence, Kansas; Henry Weistman, of Chicago, and Rev. W. W. Memminger, of Atlanta.

Many other features are being arranged, and merchants all over the state are expected to pour into Atlanta on the convention date.

In Trial for Betraying

AMAZING TALE OF INTRIGUE RELATED AT MOSCOW

Assassins of Alexander II

Moscow, January 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Amazing revelations of assassinations, plots, intrigues and terroristic acts against Alexander II, and his ministers were made today at the trial of Ivan Okladskin, who after nearly 45 years, is charged with having turned traitor and betrayed his accomplices in that notorious murder which shocked two continents.

The prisoner, who is 65 years old, appeared in court guarded by four armed soldiers. He was infirm and dressed in rags.

The bolshevik government accused Okladski of assisting the czarist police in the extermination of the notorious organization known as Naarodnaya Volio (peoples freedom) which set out to win the liberation of the Russian people from the czarist oligarchy.

He is held partly responsible for the failure of the revolutionists to accomplish their purpose until the bolshevik upheaval in 1917.

Today when the court asked the prisoner to stand up, a battery of dazzling moving picture spotlights confronted him.

Filmed for Movies.

"I am not a great man," he protested. "I don't wish to be filmed. I am not a hero."

But the cameramen did not heed his plea, for the communists desire the pictures for propaganda purposes.

The trial is being held in the largest hall in Moscow, the same building in which Lenine's body lay in state. The judge's bench, the prisoner's inclosure and the attorney's tables are arranged on a huge theatrical stage draped in the revolutionary red.

Nikolai Krylenko, Soviet Russia's most ruthless prosecutor and the terror of all who offend against revolutionary principles will demand the forfeiture of Okladski's life. It is said that the prisoner undoubtedly will be sentenced to death, but that this sentence probably will be commuted later owing to his age.

Among the thousands of spectators who are attending the trial are a dozen or more white-haired revolutionists and anarchists of the 1880 period who tried with Okladski to assassinate the czar and who were later betrayed by the prisoner. They are principal witnesses against him.

Okladski, it is said, personally was responsible for several attempts upon the life of Alexander II. He admitted having mined the winter palace in 1875, when an explosion destroyed the czar's dining room but did not harm the czar. He also confessed to having mined the railroad track at Ekaterinoslav, where the czar's train was scheduled to pass. In this instance the emperor's life was saved because of a defect in the electric wiring of the bomb.

Betrayed Accomplices.

Undaunted by two failures, Okladski is declared to have placed a huge quantity of dynamite under one of the Petrograd bridges over which the czar passed en route to a military parade. This attempt proved equally abortive. The prisoner then is said to have undertaken the manufacture of high explosive bombs and dynamite, a quantity of which was used a year later in the assassination of Alexander II.

When arrested and tried for this crime, the government charges, Okladski confessed his guilt and betrayed his accomplices, most of whom were executed or exiled. This led to the collapse of the terroristic organization which in turn led to the establishment of the blackest revolutionary period in Russian history. According to the prisoner, it was under the threat of torture and death that he was forced to give the authorities information regarding the anarchistic organization and his associates. So great were Okladski's services regarded by the czarist government, it is claimed, that it not only pardoned him, but gave him a large salary and elevated him from the rank of an ordinary peasant to that of a hereditary noble. For nearly 40 years he is said to have worked as a spy for the czarist regime, operating under various names.

Krylenko is trying to establish the fact that the prisoner, all the time that he was supposed to be a leading revolutionist and anarchist, was really acting as an agent of the czarist police and for this reason many of the plots against Alexander II failed.

COL. W. T. GENTRY PAID LAST HONORS

Funeral services for Colonel W. T. Gentry, pioneer telephone official and popular Atlantan who died Sunday afternoon, were held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon from the residence, 565 West Peachtree street. Rev. S. R. Belk officiated. Interment was in West View.

Pallbearers and honorary escorts follow: J. Epps Brown, Ben S. Reed, Addison Maupin, J. H. Graham, W. H. Adkins, Macon Martin, Frank Mikell, Charles Holditch, Frank Hawkins, Thomas W. Hardwick, John D. Little, W. H. Weaver and Evelyn Harris.

As a mark of respect for the former official and as an expression of sympathy for his family, general offices of the Southern Bell were closed Monday afternoon.

Few men had a wider acquaintance throughout the south, or a keener knowledge of social or economic conditions than Colonel Gentry. He was born at Gordonsville, Va., April 14, 1854, and entered the telegraph service at the age of sixteen in Charlottesville. From his first position until his retirement as president of the Southern Bell, 49 years later, Colonel Gentry's career as an official was marked by promotions and increasing influence.

"Ah!" said the golfer who was skating, as the ice gave way beneath him, "at last I have developed a perfect follow through."—Boston Transcript.

55 Years' Experience Fitting Glasses to Eyes

In the year 1870 the founder of this business, Mr. A. K. Hawkes, established a store in Atlanta for the scientific fitting of glasses to assist nature in correcting defects of the eyes.

Growth and expansion during the past 55 years have finally forced us into larger and more commodious quarters.

From 14 Whitehall, we have moved a short distance—into the next block—at 33 Whitehall, in the heart of the shopping district.

Here we have better facilities, more room, handsomer quarters — everything to make it what so many people say it is—the most modern optical store in the South.

$10,000 GIVEN MEMORIAL FUND

The largest individual contribution yet made to the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, $10,000 by Thomas Fortune Ryan, the New York financier, was announced Monday at headquarters of the Stone Mountain Memorial association.

Mr. Ryan is a Virginian by birth, a son of a Confederate soldier, a democrat in politics, and a friend of all enterprises for the upbuilding of the south.

Born and reared in the "Old Dominion," he started his business career in Baltimore as a boy immediately after the war, entered Wall Street at 19 years of age, became a member of the New York stock exchange when he was 23, and rose rapidly to power and prominence in the financial world.

He consolidated and reorganized railroad and coal mining properties in the south, street railroad and electric lighting properties in New York and Chicago, mining properties in numerous foreign lands, and bought the controlling interest in the Equitable Life Assurance society. On retiring from active business affairs in 1908 he was a director and controlling factor in more than 30 great corporations.

Mr. Ryan divides his time between New York, where he has a home on Fifth avenue, and a beautiful estate at Oak Ridge, Va. He attended the democratic national convention in 1904 as a delegate from Virginia and the convention held in Baltimore in 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was nominated. He belongs to the Southern Society of New York, and a number of the leading clubs, including the Lawyers, the Democratic, the Metropolitan, the Army and Navy, the Athletic and the Catholic.

Major General David C. Shanks, of the United States army, who upon his retirement from active military service in the near future, will join the staff of the memorial, was instrumental in securing Mr. Ryan's contribution, it was stated.

General Shanks is now at Walter Reed hospital, in Washington, recovering from an operation, and upon leaving the hospital he will take up active work for the memorial.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."—(adv.)

SUPREME COURT REFUSES TO PASS ON BALLOT COUNT

Washington, January 12.—The supreme court today refused to pass upon the right of Warren Worth Bailey, democratic candidate for congress from the 20th Pennsylvania district, for a recount of the ballot.

Bailey sought to appeal to the highest court after the state courts of Pennsylvania had rejected his plea that had the votes of the St. Michael's district been counted, he would have defeated his republican opponent, Anderson H. Walters.

Judge Frees Postal Clerks

In Spite of Pleas of Guilt

New York, January 12.—Four postoffice clerks, with an aggregate of 88 years' service, were permitted to walk out of the United States district court Monday—free men—notwithstanding the fact that they had pleaded guilty to stealing from the government.

In turning them loose, Judge Francis A. Winslow offered them sympathy and assistance and berated the government for its niggardly treatment of men who had served so long and so faithfully in positions of trust.

Although Judge K. M. Landis, when he was on the United States district bench in Chicago, had once been lenient to a young bank employee because, he said, the bank shared the guilt in under-paying a youth who had access to huge hums of money, this was the first time that any New York federal judge had taken this attitude. It is believed to be the first instance in which the government has been held to blame in an official decision of one of its own judges for the dishonesty of its servants.

William Gallagher, who gets $2,000 a year after 31 years of work in the postal service; Arno Schiller, a 24-year man, at $1,800 a year; William Huber, a 17-year man, at $1,800, and James Connelly, 16 years in the department, also receiving $1,800 a year, were the accused. They all pleaded guilty to stealing about $100 apiece by placing cancelled stamps on parcel post matter and pocketing the money received from the senders at their stamp windows.

They all expected stern treatment and were astounded when Judge Winslow not only refused to send them to prison, but offered to help them to find new jobs.

Gallagher has four children and Scheller has six. Huber has the responsibility of supporting his mother, 70 years old.

"Their pay is scandalous and virtually compels them to be dishonest," said Judge Winslow, after reviewing the pay and service and family responsibilities of the men. "They do not belong to the criminal class and, although I may be misunderstood for not doing so, I shall not send them to prison to become part of that class. They have records with the government which are exemplary, and I wish that some of our welfare societies would look into the troubles of the postal clerks instead of attempting to reform habitual criminals at Sing Sing."

Turning then to the four dazed beneficiaries of his judgment, the judge told them: "If you need my assistance in getting positions, I will be glad to help any of you."

As a condition of their release, the men will be on parole until June 1, and must satisfy Judge Winslow in the meanwhile that they are living honestly.

All four were employed in Station K, New York, and were caught in their peculations by government spies detailed to watch all postal employees.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—(adv.)

First Aid Unit Is Now Planned For Postoffice

Establishment of a first-aid unit in the Atlanta postoffice building, which will offer medical treatment, first aid and hospitalization to employees of the postoffice, and, if it is found feasible, to all federal employees in Atlanta, became practically a certainty with arrival here Monday of J. E. Lamiell, a representative of the United States postoffice department.

Postmaster General New ordered that such units be established in the thirty largest postoffice districts in the country and sent Mr. Lamiell on a tour of inspection to investigate facilities in the various districts.

Monday he conferred with Postmaster E. K. Large and other federal authorities here regarding services of physicians and nurses for the proposed first-aid unit.

J. T. Rose, president of the Atlanta Federal Business association, whose membership includes all federal employees in the city, said that he was heartily in accord with the plan and hoped that it would be arranged so that the units would take care of all federal employees. The first-aid unit will have its headquarters on the sixth floor of the postoffice building, it was stated.

Jitney Driver Defies Pistol, Routs Stickup

A would-be auto bandit emerged late Monday night from a fracas with W. G. Eyers, jitney driver on Edgewood avenue, without his pistol and with a more or less badly abused face—the result of an attempt on the part of the unidentified young white man, erstwhile passenger in the rear seat of the jitney—to "stick-up" the driver.

Eyers told police an unidentified young man boarded his jitney at a stop near Bass High school. As his jitney neared the Edgewood avenue bridge Eyers said he felt a slight jar in his back and heard a sharp command to "hold up your hands." Instead of complying Eyers said he clamped one foot on the brakes and turned quickly, grabbing the pistol. A fight ensued in the car, during which Eyers wrenched the pistol from the hands of his assailant, the latter jumping to the street and disappearing into the darkness. Eyers said he snapped the pistol four times in rapid succession, each snap failing to fire. Upon examination he found that the gun contained only one bullet and that "one more snap" would have fired.

Police were given a good description of the young man.

It was announced that prizes—tickets to the Lyric—would be given each day to the highest individual worker on each team. Winners Monday were R. E. L. Cone and Col. P. A. Stevens of the Aviation team.

Through cooperation with Boy Scout headquarters, a large number of window posters and automobile placards will be distributed during the week, bringing the Legion forcefully to the attention of all ex-service men. Officers of the post are confident that the quota of 1,500 new members will be raised during the week, as it is estimated that there are approximately 7,000 ex-service men in Atlanta.

Speakers announced for today and Wednesday are Col. Thomas C. Darrah, and Mayor Walter A. Sims. Special entertainment will also feature the luncheons, which will be held every day this week except Saturday at 12:30 at the Kimball House banquet hall.

SEIZE 33 COMMUNISTS IN ROUND-UP AT ROME

Rome, January 12.—(The Associated Press.)—The police today surprised and arrested 33 communists who, after a number of incendiary speeches were christening and decorating a red flag with the Soviet emblem of the hammer and sickle.

The flag bore the inscription: "Although struck by lightning, the future is ours."

The men were taken to prison. Eleven were women. This morning the police seized a flag on a pole in the Corso Vittori Emmanuele, which bore the inscription "Viva anarchy."

2 KILLED, 18 HURT IN GAS EXPLOSION

Long Beach, Cal., January 12.—Two men were killed and 18 injured in a gas explosion at the new million dollar steam generating plant of the Southern California Edison company here today.

The explosion occurred, according to a statement issued by company employees, when fire was lighted under a newly completed boiler, preparatory to steaming up. Gas escaping from a pilot light, which had been extinguished, exploded, showering brick and fragments of steel upon 200 or more men working in the room.

JUDGE PICKS JURY FOR MEANS TRIAL

New York, January 12.—Work of picking a jury for the trial of Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, and his one-time attorney, Thomas B. Felder, on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice, was completed late today.

After the jury had been sworn in and discharged until tomorrow morning, former Judge Johnston, representing Colonel Felder, moved to dismiss the indictment on the grounds that it was insufficient in law on its face and that there was not a single act alleged that shows remote tendency to effect the consummation of the agreement which had for its object the bribery of former United States Attorney General Daugherty and other government officials.

Federal Judge Walter E. Lindley, of Danville, Ill., denied the motion. A similar motion, made by attorney for Means, also was denied.

Actual taking of testimony will begin tomorrow morning.

The trial was said to be the first in which the new federal court time-saving system of having the judge qualify the jury has been employed. Counsel was allowed to question jurors only through suggestions to the court.

HARDWICK GOES TO DEFEND FELDER.

New York City, January 12.—(Special.)—Former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, of Georgia, arrived here tonight from Atlanta and is expected to appear as counsel in cases involving Thomas B. Felder, former Georgian and well-known Gotham lawyer.

Prominent lawyers from all sections of the United States have volunteered their services in Colonel Felder's behalf, and affidavits and interrogatories from scores of the leading attorneys will be submitted in behalf of the defendant. Mr. Hardwick, it is said, was selected by friends of Colonel Felder in Georgia to participate in the latter's defense. Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, and Judge Robert S. Johnstone, former judge of the court of sessions of the supreme court, are among other leading lawyers who have volunteered their services and will aid in the defense.

United States court judges, laymen in many states and prominent citizens in all walks of life have offered to appear as character witnesses for the defendant. These include Judge Remy, chief justice of Indiana's court of appeals and prominent in republican ranks; Chief Justice Brown, of the Florida supreme court and others.

Mussolini Bill Aims Death Blow At Free Masons

Rome, January 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Although the eagerly awaited session of the chamber of deputies proved a disappointment to the crowds and seekers who jammed the galleries, the sitting today was not without importance, in that it again revealed Mussolini in the characteristic rule of aggressor. Continuing to borrow a leaf from Marshal Foch's code of tactics that the best defense is to attack, Mussolini presented a bill designed to deal a death blow to Free Masonry in Italy.

The bill provides that all secret societies and clubs must file with the police copies of their constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations, as well as complete lists of the full names of their officers and members. Severe penalties are provided for failure to comply with these provisions. Although it was known that the facist government had contemplated such a measure for many months, its presentation, nevertheless, induced a profound impression.

The fascist deputies loudly applauded Mussolini after he had handed the measure to the president of the chamber and explained its nature.

The Idea Nazionale, which is considered a most reliable interpreter of the views and plans of the government, comments on the bill in such a way as to have caused a profound impression. It declares that "the measure is aimed directly against Free Masonry and all secret societies, which it describes as "inconceivable in modern society, as they are organizations wishing to subvert the functions of the state."

MAIL CLERK KILLS HIMSELF AND WIFE, WOUNDS HIS SON

Cleveland, Ohio, January 12.—Angered because his wife instituted divorce proceedings, John E. Fish, 58 a railway mail clerk, returning from his run late today, shot and killed his wife, Clara, 49, probably fatally wounded his son, Carl 26, and then shot himself, dying instantly.

Carl suffered bullet wounds in the chest after he had pushed his wife Lillian, from the range of his father's automatic pistol.

Mrs. Carl Fish, her daughter, Florence May, and Carl and his wife were in a bedroom when the elder Fish entered and began shooting without warning. His first shot at Florence May went wild and the girl dived head first through a window, receiving severe cuts about the head and arms.

THREE DESTROYERS SENT TO SHANGHAI

Manila, January 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—The United States destroyers Tracy, Smith Thompson and John B. Edwards of the Asiatic fleet left for Shanghai today as a result of the fighting reported there between rival Chinese factions. Other warships are under orders to proceed to the Chinese port in the event of their services being required there.

Modern Woman Is Conquered

:: RUBBER CORSETS AND STUPIDITY OF MEN BLAMED ::

By Civilization, Says Surgeon

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.

London, January 12.—Modern women are sexually defective, undernourished and degenerating in size, according to Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, bart., one of the most distinguished surgeons in Great Britain.

Men are responsible for this unhappy state of womanhood, according to the surgeon, who has begun a lone campaign to retrieve the lost health of civilizerd woman. The degeneration of women under the customs of civilization is the primary factor in the development of cancer, he believes.

"The poor, badly nourished thing has lost most of the physical characteristics which are such a marked feature of the magnificently built savage," Sir Arbuthnot said. "Her sexual characteristics are very defective."

"The typical negress is a magnificent animal. Her diet is simple but sufficient, and she produces vigorous offspring. Compare her with the miserable specimens you see in the streets of a modern city—bob-haired, puny, insignificant. Women are degenerating in size.

"In trying to look like boys," the surgeon continued, "women are out, it seems, to destroy the character of their sex. Rubber corsets and similar contrivances for reducing the size of the hips and chest are dangerous, and will prove most deleterious to the future race. They interfere with nutrition and are liable to cause degeneration of the most important organs.

"Women's brains are over-stimulated by what is called education, by unsuitable foods and by drugs, while the mortgage entailed by their sex makes an abnormally heavy demand upon them in consequence. They are unable to provide sufficient food for their offspring, and are obliged to fall back upon the deleterious combinations provided by food chemists.

"Men are responsible for the degeneration of women. Woman is the chief victim of civilization, and for this she is indebted to the stupidity of man. For centuries the civilzed woman has been subservient to man Those in whose hands the health of the people has been placed have been both ignorant and selfish. They have completely neglected the thing that matters most—the health of the growing boy or girl.

"Too much time has been spent trying to instill religious dogma into the mind of youth, and to the study of dead and more or less useless languages.

"Go to a dance. Instead of the beautiful feminine lines which girls in my boyhood shared with the women of savage races, you will see a poor creature sheathed from throat to hips in rubber, her hair plastered down and brushed back after the manner of boys.

"The present morbid state of things is rendering the lives of many sad—often unendurable. One may well ask, is life worth living, under these undesirable conditions?"

RAIL LABOR BOARD IS AGAIN UPHELD

Chicago, January 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Federal Judge Wilkerson today for the second time upheld the right of the railroad labor board to compel witnesses to appear and testify before it. Counsel for the defendant, J. McQuire, general chairman of engineers of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, indicated an appeal would be taken.

The board previously won a similar decision in the case of D. B. Robertson head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, who has appealed to the United States supreme court. The brotherhoods of engineers and firemen had refused to send representatives before the board in connection with the negotiations of new wages and the working conditions with western roads.

The brotherhoods took the position that the board's orders had been held unenforceable by the United States supreme court and that it was a mere arbitral body without power to compel testimony. They also charged that Ben W. Hooper, chairman, was prejudiced against them. As to that, Judge Wilkerson said:

"The labor board does not act as an arbitrator in the proper sense of the word, but as an administrative body. Its acts, if arbitrary, are void. Whether its acts are arbitrary is to be determined not by the state of mind of one of its members but by the acts themselves."

Washington, January 12.—A test of the authority of the railroad laborboard to compel attendance and testimony of witnesses, as presented in an appeal brought by D. B. Robertson, head of the firemen and engineman's brotherhood, against the labor board, was advanced by the supreme court for hearing on February 24.

NEGRO CEMETERY UNDER FIRE AGAIN

Fulton county commissioners Monday were asked by the city planning board to revoke a license recently issued for establishment of a negro cemetery near the Atlanta Child's home. The cemetery is to be located in a white section, it is claimed.

A storm of opposition to the location of the cemetery, voiced by 75 persons, confronted the planning commission when the matter was presented. While neither the planning commission nor city council has power to act in the matter, a recent charter amendment gives the board power to make recommendations to the county commission.

A number of petitions asking amendments of the city's zoning laws also were acted on by the commission. Request to change the west side of South Moreland below Ormewood from a residence to business district was disapproved.

Changing of Hurt street between Poplar circle and Edgewood avenue from a dwelling house to apartment section was approved, while action was deferred on a request to extend the business district on the east side of West Peachtree north from Fourteenth street.

An ordinance to change the name of Kennesaw alley to West Fair place was referred to the subcommittee.

SEARCY SCORES CRIME AS COURT SESSION BEGINS

Griffin, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—In an address to the Spalding county grand jury at the opening of superior court today Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., declared that the cost of crime in the county is appalling. Figures compiled from public records gave the total revenue collected in Spalding from all sources in 1923 at $115,000, of which more than $50,000 was paid out to punish crime. Judge Searcy urged everyone to stop the violation of prohibition law, pay more attention to traffic laws and regard the man who carries a pistol as a murderer at heart.

A heavy docket of civil cases faces the court this week, an unusually large number of divorce cases coming up. Criminal cases will be tried next week.

GA. QUINTET RESUMES WORK

Athens, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—Georgia's basketball squad, after a seven-day trip, returned to Athens Sunday, and today start practice for a three-day invasion into South Carolina this week, where Clemson, Furman and South Carolina will be played.

Monday the candidates were given a rest by Coach Stegeman. The road trip was very successful for the Georgians. Wins were scored by the red and black over Fort McPherson, the Savannah Athletic Club and the Biptist church five in Savannah, and the Seminole Canoe club at Jacksonville.

The locals were defeated by the Central "Y", Albany and Columbus "Y". Nolan Richardson was the high scorer on the trip, his total nearing 90 points.

Practice Today.

Practice will begin Tuesday in preparation for this week's basketball menu, which includes three games. The Bulldogs play Clemson on Thursday night, Furman on Friday night at Greenville, and the University of South Carolina next Saturday night at Columbia.

Coach Stegeman will probably take ten men on the South Carolina invasion, and they will leave here Thursday morning. His selection will be made from the following: Charlie Weibrs, Nolan Richardson, "Slick" Lamar, George Morton, Turner, Hargis, Forbes, Mell Huguley, Kilpatrick, Satlof, and Frain.

Lieutenant McLamb, graduate of West Point, has been obtained by the University officials, and began work Monday in the department of physical education.

Lieutenant McLamb formerly went to G. M. C. and from there to West Point, where he graduated last June. Since he has resigned, and will assist in the class work of the department of physical education.

PACIFIC COAST PLAYS AMERICAN

Los Angeles, Cal., January 12.—Club owners and directors of the Pacific Coast Baseball league gathered here at their annual meeting, voted today to play a post-season "little world's series" with the American association.

The agreement will extend over a period of five or ten years and will include the International league in case that organization cares to participate.

The season will open April 7.

Reports that H. W. Lane, former owner of the Salt Lake club of the Pacific Coast Baseball league, and Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher of the Washington club of the American league, were bidding against each other for the Vernon club franchise were in circulation here.

Lane, while denying that he held an option on the Vernon club, said that either he or Johnson would get the franchise, according to the highest bid made.

Feel Blue?
Intestinal congestion may be to blame

MEDICAL science today looks for physical causes when a patient is constantly troubled with depression.

It has been established that chronic constipation has a great deal to do with that distressing condition most of us describe as "feeling blue."

Certainly, there can be no harm in thoroughly flushing the intestines of disturbing accumulations, when something of this sort is the matter. And, of course, the safe, effective physic to take is Pluto Water.

Unlike slow, uncertain, over-night cathartics, Pluto Water acts promptly—in 30 minutes to two hours. A cleansing internal bath, its result is to make a person feel better all over—more interested in life and living. The poisons that cause depression are eliminated from the system.

Pluto Water is prescribed by physicians, sold by druggists and bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

World Series Hero Turned Deaf Ear to All Obstacles; Accepted Job in Office

This is the third installment of the autobiography of Stanley Harris, youngest major league baseball manager in the history of the game, and the victorious strategist and one of the outstanding players in the 1924 world series, in which his Washington club won the pennant for the first time. The rise of Harris from colliery boy to big league manager in eight years is one of the most remarkable life stories America has ever produced.

BY STANLEY BUCKY HARRIS,
Manager World Champion Washington Senators

(Copyright, 1925, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

The white collar job didn't pay as much as the one in the mines. Instead of 12 cents an hour the scale was eight cents. There was no reduction in hours. If I took the job my pay would be cut to $4.32 a week. That didn't look very good to me. But the arguments of mother and Merle soon convinced me that my best chance for getting ahead lay in working in the office, for a time at least.

The other boys in the mine joshed me about taking a job at less money. They couldn't understand why a fellow would do such a thing. And I wouldn't have, if it hadn't been for my mother and brother. A couple of dollars a week was a lot of money to the kids in Pittston—and to their families as well.

"We'll get along all right," mother assured me. "I want you to grow up to be something besides a miner. You won't get very far working with your hands alone."

Again I informed her I would be a baseball player some day. She smiled and told me in the meantime to work hard in the office, go to night school and let my baseball future take care of itself.

May Mean Change

"Stan, you're a live wire kid and this may mean a good break for you," Merle told me when I made the change. "It's a tough racket trying to make the grade in professional baseball and you're so doggone small you'll have a lot of trouble. Now if your size should be against you, you'll be set for a good job with the coal company."

"I'm not through growing yet," I answered. "I'll be big enough to play baseball for a living some day if I've got the other stuff."

"Atta boy," Merle came back. "But always leave yourself protected when you make a jump. Don't neglect a sure thing to gamble on an uncertainty. Do your best on the job and the next one will take care of itself."

Knowing how set I was on becoming a baseball player, and knowing from personal experience the fierce competition for minor and major league berths, Merle was preparing me for what he feared would some day be a great disappointment. He didn't set a very high value in those days on my playing ability. And I don't blame him either. Few kids ever looked less like major league timber.

Nick Gets Me a Seat.

The Butler colliery was four miles from Pittston. I had to get up at 5:30 in the morning to catch the company train for the mine. Mother would let me sleep until the last possible minute. I could dress as fast as a fireman. She would have a hot breakfast on the table when I raced into the kitchen.

She would see I was bundled up to the eyes on cold mornings. And that was a tough winter, too. I must have made a strange sight, as I jogged up and down the wind-swept platform to keep warm while waiting in the lantern light for the train to take me to work. I came in for a lot of joshing from the miners, because of my clothing. Much of it had once been Merle's. Some of it was patched.

One of them, a Pole, who had Americanized his name to Nick Stanley, had a lot of good natured fun with me. He was a giant in stature. Like most big men he was slow to anger. The only time I ever saw him mad was when he beat up two fellow Poles who ousted me from my seat and dropped me, none too gently, in the aisle. They evidently had had a hard night in the barrooms. Certainly they needed the seat more than I did, but Nick didn't like their methods.

When he had beaten them up thoroughly he took the seat and pulled me in beside him. In his precise English he told me that when I grew up never to let a big man pick on a little one. Poor Nick! He went to France to fight for his adopted country and never returned.

Became Great Friends.

Nick and I became great friends. He would joke me about being all covered up except my eyes, advise me always to keep them open and to use them daily to learn something. He predicted that I would be a mine boss. He couldn't understand why I wanted to be a baseball player. I read him the sporting pages, telling of big league salaries. They were far less then than now. To Nick the figures seemed fabulous. They did to me, too.

"Maybe I won't ever make as much as $5,000 a year," I told Nick, "but I'll make a couple of hundred a month."

"Don't aim for the low—aim for the high," Nick advised. "Some day you will be big—then you can do big things."

He had been going to night school and had studied copy book proverbs. But no one can say his philosophy was unsound. Nick was a friend, all right. I wish he might have seen the world's series with the Giants.

BOXING CARD FEATURES SMOKER

Atlanta's first boxing program of the new year will be offered Thursday night at the inaugural smoker of the Business Men's Athletic club, to which only the active members of the club and their invited guests will be admitted.

An exceptionally good program of 24 rounds, embracing six bouts has been arranged and will present leading amateur and professional talent of Atlanta.

Larry Avera, the junior welterweight champion of the south, is one of the fighters who will appear on the club card. Larry has been victorious in 18 of his last 20 fights and will box a three-round exhibition with Fearless Ferns.

Lew Silver, who has not been seen in action here in some time, will engage in a three-round exhibition affair with Billy McGowan. The latter has a weight advantage of something like 30 pounds.

The amateurs and two negroes on the program are expected to provide the real fighting of the evening, the other matches being booked more as boxing exhibitions. Herbert Moore and Happy Hunter, negro light-heavyweights, are expected to produce a few thrills. They fought a draw on the recent McTigue-King card and proved a young sensation by their willing efforts and tornado style of attack.

JACKETS MEET INFANTRY TONIGHT

Georgia Tech's basketball team will meet the fast 22nd Infantry quintet tonight at 8 o'clock on the Fort McPherson court in the third game of the season for the Yellow Jackets.

Coach Hansen's Tech quint started off on a rather disastrous season last Friday night when a hard-fought game was lost to the Atlanta Athletic club by a one-point margin and again Saturday night the Tech quint fell before a fast and furious attack, but Saturday night it was Clemson college and the margin of victory for the invaders was two points.

Skinney Dennicke played forward last season but his ability to advance the ball up the court has been fully appreciated and Coach Hansen has been using him as a running guard, a position which he plays well.

EXTRA GAMES ON AT Y. M. C. A.

Six fast and interesting games of basketball are slated to be played tonight on the Y. M. C. A. court on the weekly Sunday school schedule. The first game will start at 6:30 o'clock between the Druid Hills Baptist and the St. Paul team.

This week is one of the busy weeks for the Sunday school teams. No less than 12 games will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court before the week closes on Saturday night.

The extra games were necessary because of the odd number of teams in several of the leagues. Starting at 6:30 o'clock a game will be in progress until 10 o'clock, but one feature of the games is that a new team will take the floor every 15 minutes.

The schedule for tonight follows:

6:30—Druid Hills Baptist versus St. Paul (Southern).

6:50—Wesley versus Central Baptist (Federal).

7:45—Anchor class versus F. E. F. (National).

8:05—Druid Hills Presbyterian versus Central Presbyterian (Southern).

9:00—Gordon Street Presbyterian versus Oakhurst (American).

GIBSON SIGNS TO COACH CHICAGO

Chicago, January 12.—Geofge Gibson, veteran catcher and former pilot of the Pittsburg Pirates, today became coach of the Chicago Cubs, succeeding Oscar Dugey, who was unconditionally released.

Gibson a student of the "old school," started his baseball career with the Buffalo club in 1903. He joined the Pirates in 1904, remaining for 11 years. While with the Pittsburg club he established a major league record for catching consecutive games. This record of 150 games stood until Ray Schalk, of the White Sox, took the honor by backstopping in 151 contests.

Gibson went to the New York Giants in 1917 and 1918, but was sent to Montreal the following year. Pittsburg claimed Gibson as manager in 1920 but in 1922 he was succeeded by William McKechnie.

The new coach the following season coached the Washington Senators under the management of Donnie Bush. Last season Gibson spent his time hunting and fishing.

RICKARD AFTER NURMI MATCH

New York, January 12.—Noting that Paavo Nurmi's first appearance drew $40,000, Tex Rickard has decided to make Nurmi an offer and will try to meet him Tuesday to persuade him to become a professional. Realizing that Nurmi running alone would be no great attraction, Rickard will make corresponding offers to several other distance runners to make up his "field" in the improbable event that Nurmi should accept his proposal.

"I haven't seen Nurmi yet, but I'm going to look him up right away," Rickard told the United News Monday evening. "I can show him how to make a lot of money running as a pro."

"Nurmi speaks only Finnish, Tex," he was reminded. "Are you going to get an interpreter or do you reckon that money speaks a universal language."

Chapter LI.—Longs for Ye Old Days—For 'A Schaefer,' For "The Old Gang."

BY H. G. SALSINGER.

No player ever had more trials and tribulations in trying to break into the major leagues than Ty Cobb. He was harassed on all sides. Veterans of the rough and tumble school, the men that knew how to give and take, were the kind that he went up against. He was sensitive, hot-tempered, sharp-tongued; he was the type of player that invited "riding" and the boys were accommodating—they "rode" Cobb. They would steal his shoes and part of his uniform. They even made kindling wood out of his pet bats. They would lock him out of the clubhouse after a game so that he could not get in to take a shower. When he did get in they made him stand aside and wait until all had their baths.

They had not won any pennants when he joined them and they did not threaten to win any. They were just a ball team playing out the schedule after July 4, with no place to go, as they say in baseball. They helped fill out the league muster.

Jennings the Diplomat.

The third season that Cobb was with the team Hughie Jennings was manager. And Jennings found the type of players that he desired, the fighting, hard-boiled variety of scrapping ball players. They had the stuff in them and it took a man with the diplomacy and leadership of Jennings to mould them into a machine. Instead of being nine units, each bound in a different direction, they became a whole with one purpose.

Cobb led this fighting attack. Behind his fine exhibition of competitive spirit the others fell in and fought on. The men that had been his chief tormentors, the very players that had tried to close the door to him and break him, became the beneficiaries of the skill they could not smother and the spirit they could not dampen.

Cobb has forgiven them for their attitude and many times after they passed he longed for them.

"If we only had some of the old gang here now," he has often mused. "If we only had a 'Germany' Schaefer, a Claud Rossman, a Charley O'Leary, a Matty McIntyre and Davey Jones—What I'd give to have them on this team now. Yes, and a Charlie Schmidt and Bill Donovan. And a George Mullin.

"They Had the Stuff."

"Those were the boys, let me tell you. They were the boys that had the stuff. You don't see it any more. They don't seem to be turning out their type these days. They were the fellows that had the old fight. They had the dash and the ginger. They were game, those boys. Imagine that crew laying down the way these fellows do! Imagine what they would do. 'Come on, at 'em and tear 'em up,' is what they used to yell and that's just what they did. They battled everybody. You couldn't beat them because they wouldn't let you. They were a rip-roaring and tearing lot. Lord, if I could only get about six players like those of the old days when we had a fighting team."

The attitude that Cobb first encountered when he reported to the Detroit management had its beneficial results. Cobb at that time made up his mind that if he ever got the opportunity he would lend a helping hand to a recruit. He would do all he could do for them. He would see that other recruits did not undergo the sam humiliation, torture, embarrassment and mental agony that he did.

Cobb kept his promise. He has always befriended the recruit. Any time he got the opportunity he gave helpful advice to youngsters breaking into the big leagues, or trying to. He never failed to encourage them; to give them hints on hitting, fielding; he told them how they could improve themselves.

If They Took It.

Any recruit who took Cobb's advice and followed it sincerly was certain to continue getting it, particularly if he showed any improvement.

"I am getting old," said Cobb a few years ago. "I'm getting to that stage where it will soon be the bench for me. The old legs and arms won't respond the way they used to. We all reach that stage sooner or later. I'm near it now.

"I used to get a great deal of pleasure out of doing things myself. Now I get my pleasure out of getting others to do them. There is more satisfaction, I find, in seeing a recruit develop under the advice and training you give him than in accomplishing something yourself. At least I'm getting more pleasure out of it than I used to get out of my batting and base-running and fielding. Doing things through others holds a far richer reward."

There is one thing at which Cobb draws the line and that is having a recruit dispute him. As soon as one of his pupils questions his opinion on anything concerning baseball Cobb immediately resigns as instructor. His word and his opinion must be final and beyond question or argument as far as the recruit is concerned.

NEW MENTOR AT HARVARD, RUMOR

Cambridge, Mass., January 12.—The report that Percy Wendell, former all-American fullback, recently coach at Williams and now under contract with Lehigh university, would be sought as head coach at Harvard for the 1925 season, was circulated late today after Fred W. Moore, graduate treasurer of athletics, had denied that Charles D. Daly, former Harvard and Army quarterback, had been selected for the position by the graduate advisory football committee.

While no official statement was forthcoming as to the status of Robert T. Fisher, head coach of the Crimson for six years, it was generally accepted in Harvard athletics circles that the Fisher regime was over and that a new coaching administration would be inaugurated with the next football season.

Committee Is Silent.

Members of the advisory football committee whose meeting in Boston last night gave rise to the rumors of Daly's selection, maintained silence today. Well-informed members of the Harvard Athletic association admitted, however, that there was a strong desire to obtain Wendell's services.

Wendell, who made a record as coach during his four years at Williams, has signed a contract to coach Lehigh eleven for three years. This contract calls for $10,000 a year, it is understood. When Wendell accepted the offer, it was with the understanding that he would be released if called by Harvard, according to reports published at the time.

Fisher refused today to confirm or deny reports that he had resigned.

Fisher, who was captain of Harvard's 1911 team, succeeded Percy Haughton as head coach in 1919. His teams won their objective games with Yale in that year, and the three following, but met with crushing defeat in 1923 and 1924.

NURMI WANTS MORE RECORDS

New York, January 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Paavo Nurmi will put his remarkable speed and stamina to its greatest tests this week when on successive nights he will attempt to lower seven world's indoor records in two races at New York and Chicago.

Twice before at the olympics and again a week ago at Madison Square Garden, the phantom Finn demonstrated his ability to run two record-breaking races within less than two hours of each other. Even these performances, however, will be eclipsed if he is successful in smashing any records here Thursday night, taking a 21 hours' train ride to Chicago and then racing to victory and new records again there Friday night against Joie Ray and other stars.

CLOSE GAMES PLAYED BY EPWORTH

BY GORDON KEITH.

The second week of the Epworth league schedule got off to a hectic start Monday night with three games, two of them of the closest order and the third a walk-away. College Park had a terrible time defeating Center street in the opener 33-22, but the College Park girls found St. Johns easy and gave them a neat 20-6 lacing. The closing game was between Grace and Capitol View, and a real basketball game it was. Grace won out in a hair-raising finish 22-20, but not until the score had been knotted in the last minute of play by a brilliant rally on the part of Capitol View, which had been trailing by five points.

College Park annexed its second victory of the season by defeating Center street, and incidentally Center street lost its second start, but the losing team was an entirely different club from the one that went down in defeat to Trinity a week ago. College Park got off to an early lead and was never headed, but the losers gave them one of the hardest runs for their money they can expect to get.

Hutcheson, Bell and Morris played brilliant ball for the winners, Hutcheson getting 12 points, Bell 11, and Morris eight. Jacobs was high point man for Center with eight, and Kerr was a jump behind with six. Kerr played center, and all three of his field goals came from throw from the center of the court and shot from over his shoulder. His goals were really brilliant scoring features. Both teams played good games and are very much in the race. They are in the State league.

Lineup and Summary.

C. PARK (33)	Pos.	C. ST. (22)
Hutcheson (12)	r.f.	Jacons (8)
Bell (11)	l.f.	Clark (4)
Morris (8)	c.	Kerr (6)
Richardson	r.g.	Herman (8)
O. Hutcheson (2)	l.g.	Rosier

Substitutions for College Park: Davis for Hutcheson, Hutcheson for Richardson.

Referee, Holt.

Short Plays Well.

The College Park girls ran wild against St. Johns and won in easy fashion, 20 to 6. The entire College Park team played good ball, but the work of Short, at center, was particularly brilliant. She shot six points and Dorough was next with five. St. Johns was playing its first game and suffered from lack of team work. This is College Park's second victory, the club having already won from Druid Hills. St. Johns won last week on a forfeit. The teams are in the Tiger league.

Lineup and Summary.

C.P. (20)	Pos.	St.J. (6)
Dorough (5)	rf.	Ward (2)
Hunter (3)	lf.	Peake (1)
Short (6)	c.	Crawley (2)
Upchurch	rg.	Jones
Newborn (1)	lg.	Caudle

Substitutions—College Park: Culpepper (5) for Dorough, Phillips for Upchurch, Holt for Newborn: St. Johns: Etheridge (1) for Peake, Doyle for Etheridge, Allen for Jones.

Referee—Glassman.

Grace Paves Way.

The Grace-Capitol View game was a corker from the start, with Grace showing the way and Capitol View trailing by two or three points. The losers were even only once, in the last minute of play when a couple of long shots had tied the count at 20 all. Babb, substitute forward, sank a field goal for Grace a moment later, however, and the game was won.

The feature was the last-minute rally staged by Cantrell, Aiken and company, but the whole game was an exhibition of good basketball.

Smith and Lindsey starred for the winners, and Perkerson played a good game at center. The Capitol View forwards, Cantrell and Aiken, played best ball for the losers, with 10 and 7 points to their credit. These clubs are in the Atlanta league and the Grace victory was the only game either team had won.

Lineup and Summary.

GRACE (22)	Pos.	CAP. V. (20)
Smith (7)	rf.	Aiken (7)
Hollingsworth	lf.	Cantrell (16)
Perkerson (3)	c.	Dorsey (1)
Gorman (2)	rg.	Thurman
Lindsey (8)	lg.	McCutcheon (2)

Substitutions—Grace: Babb (2) for Perkerson, Perkerson for Hollingsworth, Cassady for Gorman, Babb for Perkerson, Sanford for Smith; Capitol View: Perkle for McCutcheon H. Forsey for Thurman, Thurman for Dorsey.

Referee—Glassman.

WALKER BOWS TO YOUNG STRIBLING

Miami, Fla., January 12.—Young Stribling, southern light heavyweight boxer, outpointed Hugh Walker of Kansas City in a ten-round no-decision bout here tonight. Stribling won every round, according to newspaper men at the ring side. There were no knockdowns, but Stribling was too fast for the Kansas Citian, who was unable to land an effective blow.

Stribling's weight was announced at 173 pounds and Walker's poundage was given at 172 pounds.

Stribling's foot work enabled him to elude most of Walker's rushes, but he was unable to lend many telling blows against the Kansas City scrapper. Walker took everything that Stribling offered and came back for more.

Up to the ninth round, Walker had not landed more than two good blows. He started an offensive in the ninth that quickly put Stribling on the defensive. He was unable to break through for a knockout, and in the last round Stribling landed at will, his superior reach giving him a big advantage.

Jimmy Lewis, of White Plains, N. Y., outpointed Young Trevor, of Key West, in the 10-round semi-final. They are featherweights. Manny Owens, of Buffalo, N. Y., had the best of Doug McGee, of East Chicago, in a 10-round bout for 145 pounders. The second bout of the evening saw the only knockout, when Benny Touchstone, of Tampa, stopped Charles Jones, of Boston, in one minute and 47 seconds. They are heavyweights.

The opening bout of the evening saw Dick Baker, of Savannah, outpoint Mutt Griffin, of Macon. Both weighed 118 pounds.

Beautiful Passing Attack In Final Stages of Game Brings 25-to-17 Victory

BY ROY WHITE.

Staging a beautiful passing attack in the last half, the fast Jewish Progressive club won a well-played basketball game from the Purple Hurricane of Furman university, last night on the Jewish Alliance court by a score of 42 to 36.

Furman, with a well-balanced club, started out in the lead soon after the game began, when Robertson sank a field goal from close range and soon followed with another. From then on during the first half it was a case of too much Furman for the J. P. C., and when the first half ended Furman was on the long end of a 25 to 17 score.

Starting the second half, eight points behind, the Jewish Progressive club began a passing attack that seemed almost impossible to stop and soon the score was tied. Robertson, of Furman, made a long shot that gave Furman the lead, and Finkelstein scored two foul shots to tie the score. Captain Speilberger sank a long shot for J. P. C. and the locals were never tied again during the last four minutes of play.

Robertson Shines.

Robertson at center seemed to be the center of Furman's attack, for he scored a total of 17 points in the first half. He was the center of the Furman passing attack and to be exact, Robertson was the leading man for the Purple Hurricane.

Galloway, running guard, was also in the thick of the fray at all times. He did not score but two field goals, but his handling of the ball was a bright feature. He was the main source of advancing the ball to within scoring distance for Furman.

Near the close of the first half Robertson fell and hurt his ankle but he continued to play all during the second half. He was not as active, however, in the second half and scored only one field goal and that came in the closing moments of play when a final Furman rally was started but fell short as the timer's whistle ended the game.

Finkelstein Leads.

Captain Speilberger and Joe Finkelstein were the offensive stars for the winners. Finkelstein was the leading scorer of the game with 24 points to his credit, 10 field goals and four fouls. Finkelstein was death on foul shots with four goals out of four tries. Dorfan, at center, played a great game in the second half and his jumping at center was a big factor in the J. P. C. rally.

MARTIN GETS CLOSE SHAVE

Philadelphia, January 12.—Eddie ("Cannonball") Martin, bantamweight champion, was awarded the referee's decision over Tommy Murray, Philadelphia, at the end of a 10-round bout tonight after the judges had disagreed. The decision was unpopular with the fans. Martin, whose title was not at stake, weighed 118 1-2 and Murray, 121.

TWO CLUBS TAKEN IN COTTON LEAGUE

Jackson, Miss., January 12.—Alexandria, La., and Meridian, Miss., were granted franchises and an eight-club circuit formed at a meeting today of the directors of the Cotton States league. Hattiesburg, Jackson, Vicksburg, Brookhaven and Laurel, Miss., and Monroe, La., are the other teams making up the enlarged 1925 baseball loop.

The resignation of President Scott was rejected by the directors and he was urged to continue in his present capacity.

All the clubs were represented at the meeting except Alexandria.

RACING TIPS RESULT IN ARREST

Memphis, January 12.—"Tips" to race track followers led today to the arrest here of a man giving the name of E. M. Goodwin on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Goodwin, according to postal inspectors, who made the arrest, sent out the names of horses, naming them as likely winners in the events they were entered in. If the horse won Goodwin in most instances received a certain portion of the winnings and if the animal lost the "tipster" was none the worse, for the telegram containing the information was sent collect, the agents stated.

Complaints from dissatisfied customers were found in a batch of letters seized after Goodwin's arrest. Many of them seemed to come, inspectors stated, from the failure of the horse named Vexation to live up to advance notices.

A charge of violating the prohibition act was also placed against Goodwin after whisky was found in his room, the officers stated.

Preps, Except Commercial, To See Action This Week

BY GORDON KEITH.

Contrary to all precedent and much to the sorrow of the prep world, Fulton High will not put a basketball team on the floor this winter in either the Boys' or Girls' league. Such condition is brought about by the inability of the authorities to secure a court for the teams to practice upon. Not a chance was left untried, but the comparatively few courts were full to overflowing and the county school was unable to squeeze in anywhere. Next year, with the completion of the new building, the Fulton basketeers will have one of the best floors in the city and the school hopes to make up for lost time then. The Fulton girls' team, especially has always been a big factor in the local cage circuits, and the loss of these two teams from the ranks hurts the preps a great deal.

With the exception of Commercial, all the prep fives will swing into action this week and several rattling good games are on the local card. G. M. A. will meet Boys' High Wednesday afternoon in the new high school armory, and Friday the Cadets will encounter the Marist club at Marist. Both games should be right up to par and give a line on the relative strength of three of the strongest of the local clubs. Boys' High and G. M. A. have already seen action, but the Friday game will mark the opening of the Marist schedule.

Smithies Start.

Tech High will pry the lid off its cage season this week by meeting some local club, probably the Fort, although no definite arrangements have been made. University will journey to Monroe Saturday where the flying Bluebirds hope to revenge the defeat given them in football, the only one suffered by the home eleven. Decatur will open its schedule with a game with some local or nearby five, although no game has been definitely billed. The Decatur quintet played an early game Saturday with an independent freshman five, but the DeKalb team will start hostilities with a team in its own class this week. About the first of next week the home fives will all be right in the midst of their schedules, and fur will be flying thick and fast by the last of the week.

Boys' High has the hardest schedule for this week, the Hurricane meeting three of the strongest fives in the state. After the cadet game Wednesday the local team rests up Thursday and then journeys to Macon Friday to tackle the strong Lanier High club Friday night. Saturday night the Purple will move on to Columbus where the charges of Coach Johnson will run up against the high school five.

Coach will put his boys through the paces the first two days of this week, however, and this weakness will certainly show an improvement by Wednesday. The team will have to be in mighty good condition to hope to make a success of this week's undertaking, and coach has a big job ahead of him to pull his men through with flying colors.

G. M. A. looked like a million dollars against Marietta last Friday and played rings around the high school, despite the fact that the Cadets had had only something like three practice sessions since returning to school. The Cadets were simply overwhelmed in the Tech Freshman game, as most any green prep club would be when running up against a team boasting such stars as Tiny Hearn and Nick George. Eaton and Mathews played mighty good games, as did Camp and Dishman, and with a little more practice and experience the club will come close to the unbeatable combination of the College Park club last year.

Marist held several practices during the holidays and the club is coming along nicely on its new court. Although coach Bean has not definitely announced his varsity, the Cadets will probably take the floor against G. M. A. Friday with Williams playing center, Fee and Corrigan, the halfback combination this fall, at forwards, and probably Holland and Lanford at the guards. Marist has a fast club this winter and despite the heavy loss of veterans expects to make the preps step this season.

New York, January 12.—An early decline in the cotton market today was followed by rallies promoted by reports that private estimates of the East Indian crop were being reduced March sold up from 23.73 to 24.10, compared with 23.87 on Saturday and closed at 24.05, the general market closing virtually at net advances of 17 to 21 points.

The opening was unchanged to 5 points lower under local and southern selling, probably promoted by disappointing Liverpool cables. Offerings were not heavy, however, and after showing net losses of about 10 to 14 points prices steadied on trade buying and covering. Firmness in the grain market was reflected by western buying of cotton. Wall street interests also were buyers during the afternoon and trading became more active on the advance which carried the price of May up from 24.05 to 24.42 and July from 24.26 to 24.64, or about 22 to 30 points above Saturday's closing quotations on the general list. Probably a little early selling followed rumors that private returns indicated domestic mill consumption of only 464,000 bales for December against 492,000 for November and 464,000 for December last year. Later there were reports that another authority placed the December consumption at 504,000 to 525,000 bales but the figures had slight effect on the market.

In connection with talk of a disappointing East Indian crop outturn, it was reported that a trade authority had reduced its estimate by 200,000 bales, bringing the total down to about last year's figures. Originally this authority estimated the Indian crop 600,000 bales above last year's outturn.

Private cables said the Liverpool market had been influenced by the advance in sterling exchange and selling by houses with United States connections which offset a very good spot demand. Further rains were reported in the eastern belt, but traders here claimed that the drought in the southwest had not been adequately broken.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

ROLLIES ARE SEEN AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, January 12.—The cotton market today made a reactionary start due to easier Liverpool advices than due and a somewhat easier tone in the stock market. The early decline was helped by a private consumption estimate for December of 460,000 bales. After declining 14 points on March, the market became steadier and rallied some on another private consumption estimate of 500,000 bales compared with 46,789 bales the previous year. During the afternoon there was a good rally on covering induled by a firm stock market and a sharp advance in wheat. At the highest March showed a net gain of 26 points over Saturday's close but lost a little of the gain in the final trading closing 20 points up net.

At the start prices showed losses of 3 to 7 points mainly on the easier Liverpool but recovered the loss right after the call only to turn reactionary on the bearish consumption estimate already referred to. At the lowest March traded at 23.70, May at 23.96 and October at 23.45, or 9 to 15 points below the previous close. The subsequent rally finally carried March up to 24.10, May to 24.40 and October to 23.85, or 40 to 44 points above the morning lows. The close was slightly below the best of the day showing net gains of 16 to 24 points, October being the strongest month.

The afternoon rally was largely due to a recovery in the stock market and sharp upturn in wheat coupled with reports of a good spot demand from interior markets. One of the features of the day was the good demand and comparative strength of the October position the only new crop month so far traded in. This was attributed largely to the continued absence of rains in the west, particurarly in Texas, which is causing some anxiety as to the prospects of the next crop. There was a firmer feeling in the market due to expectations of a bullish census report on December consumption due Wednesday as well as to anticipations of bullish weekly statistics. Exports of the day totalled 38,485 bales.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, January 12.—The cotton market gathered momentum as the day progressed and with Steel Common reaching 125⅝ with exceptional activity other groups had no difficulty whatsoever in advancing to new high levels for the current move. Nash Motors continued its sensational advance, reaching 122, or a gain of 12 points. The coppers were rather dull in spite of the fact that heavy sales of the red metal were reported at 15⅛@15¼ cents a pound.

The oil news was of a favorable nature and one dispatch was to the effect that crude oil output from the Wertham Pool had declined about 15,000 barrels since last Saturday. In this group Marland was the outstanding feature, reaching 44 on a heavy volume of transactions. Sinclair, Phillips Pete, Pan American, Pacific Oil, Texas Company and the Standard oil issues were also in considerable demand.

Manhattan Shirt in the specialty group rallied sharply following a report that recent litigation involving patent rights owned by the Phillips Jones had been settled out of court. A number of firms are reported to have been involved in this litigation. Call money was in plentiful supply at 3 per cent. Lead, zinc, silver and other metal prices showed a strong tone.

In the motor group, General Motors was the star performer, closing at 73, up 4 points for the day. It was difficult to explain why Studebaker did not keep pace with this advance in the motor group.

In the railroad group most issues were fractionally higher. Missouri Pacific preferred made the best showing of the day closing at 81½ up 2¾ points. Interborough also rallied sharply to 33. The railroad equipments followed the steel under the leadership of American Locomotive, which is doing a record business at present time. This stock closed at 113½, a net advance of 3½ points. Total sales were 2,107,900 shares and the closing tone through out the entire list was almost buoyant.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, January 12.—Some considerable reaction is due in the next few weeks and consequently purchases should be limited to trading commitments. As a group the rails seem to be in a stronger position than many of the industrials, however, and on dips we would continue to buy New York Central, Southern Railway, Lehigh Valley, Rock Island, Southern Pacific, Atchison, Missouri Pacific and Wabash "A."

Leathers are showing more life and we expect higher prices in both Central Leather preferred and American Hide & Leather preferred. U. S. Rubber acts peculiarly, but we believe it will eventually sell a great deal higher and so should Goodrich.

Cotton Letters.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, January 12.—The tone of the market has been generally steady at a slight decline from the previous close, but it has looked that aggressive selling would be at prices down for some distance before encountering any broad and adequate resistance. The line of cleavage in sentiment seems about the same with the actual trade for the most part friendly to the market and favoring scale down purchases for a pull while speculative interests can see little except the prospective surplus indicated by recently published figures covering all growths and are unable to persuade themselves that such a condition if verified by later facts will not mean an avalanche of selling, which will be impossible to resist successfully. The net result is that the market depends almost exclusively on trade demand for support except on the occasions when speculative shorts for some reason turn to cover. Whenever the covering begins to show signs of coming to an end prices display a softening tendency until they run down to a point where trade demand starts again. Based on the predictions of experts as to the future of trade it seems very probable that that point will gradually advance and that consumers will be enabled to pay higher prices for raw material which they are entirely willing to do if they can sell the goods. Of pressure either existing or impending from the actual stuff there is no sign; here and there a stray lot may be sold at a concession, but those who try to buy in any quantity find the basis very firm and in many sections are already meeting difficulty in locating the cotton as interior stocks have been closely absorbed according to best advices. With the peak of the hedge selling well in the rear an oversold condition will readily develop and it looks that the world would readily take the available supply and ask for more if it could be secured between 20 and 23 cents.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, January 12.—Cotton opened easy on professional selling and eased 15 points during the first hour. Resistance to pressure reduced the selling to a minimum after this. Later a good deal of outside buying developed and prices rallied 40 to 44 points. The buying was stimulated by rise of wheat to new high levels, strength of stocks and belief that cotton ought to share in the advance.

We believe that cotton is relatively too cheap and that it will soon share in the upward movement. The forecasts indicate that consumption for December will show a substantial increase over November.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, January 12.—Considering the smallness of the market, the advance today was significant and demonstrated the inherent strength of the position. The professional element has for some days been endeavoring to bring about a decline and in the almost total absence of speculative demand their contracts have been absorbed by trade interests, which makes for a healthy technical position as clearly demonstrated by the action of the market today. Spot cotton meanwhile appears for sale only when prices become satisfactory to the owners thereof, and as the latter now occupy a more or less independent position we continue to feel that chances favor the long side rather than the short.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, January 12.—The market today has been almost entirely professional. There was no news to have any material bearing on values and the moderate advance was due chiefly to local short covering, induced by resistance of the market and scattered New Orleans buying, while professional sentiment continues bearish the majority of trade houses are moderately bullish. There seems nothing in the situation at the moment to cause any radical price movement in either direction, but the bearish influences in the situation appear to have been pretty thoroughly discounted, and in view of the steady trade demand for both spots and futures we feel that the situation favors an advance rather than any further decline. The continued strength of the wheat market and firmness of stocks together with the expectation that the presence of a large number of out-of-town buyers will be likely to result in a substantial increase in the sales of goods this week, have contributed to the steadiness of the market today. In view of the action of the market recently and the optimistic view of the prospects for a revival in the demand for goods we believe that cotton will do to buy on any setbacks.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, January 12.—The cotton market experienced fresh news today in the form of a private crop estimate placing the yield of Indian no larger than last year. The same authority has been gradually scaling down figures from an indicated yield 600,000 bales greater than last year. The cause of the latest reduction is unseasonable November and December rains. The stock and grain markets contributed somewhat to the better feeling in cotton grain making and closing at new high records. And many stocks making new high records. The steadiness of cotton has indicated rather thorough liquidation for some time. This, together with the steady movement of cotton and cloths gives the market about the healthiest appearance it has had for a long time. March Liverpool, due 12.92.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, January 12.—(A. V. Curran & Co., Correspondents.)—General fundamentals in trade remain sound and promise to become stronger as noted in the increasing activity in the industrial districts, due to larger bookings of steel in consequence of the need of extensive equipment replenishments, small stocks of finished goods in first hands, a surplus of ready money at low interest rates, and because of very high prices for grain and a fair price for raw cotton, and the arriving of an understanding as to the interallied war debts. The monthly report of the N. S. Steel corporation, which was released last Saturday, showed an unexpected large monthly increase of 784,787 tons of unfilled orders booked during December, bringing the total to 4,816,758 tons, the largest since February, 1924, when bookings were 4,912,901 tons. This was the largest month's increase in three years, comparing with 508,-990 tons in November. Present operations are reported to be about 85 per cent of capacity and are expected to show a further increase in the near and distant future. The cotton textile industry, particularly in Europe, is keeping pace with the improvement noted in the metal industry, with prospects of a further expansion last half this year or at a time when it was slowing down last year.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, January 12.—Liverpool this morning was a shade lower than due, but spot sales were large at 7,000 bales and the market continues to report improving conditions in Manchester. Here prices were lower early in sympathy with the easier cables, but on some trade demand and the continued drought in the southwest, market improved above Saturday's close by the early afternoon. An excellent spot demand was reported from the south with an improving basis so that the New York contract was gradually getting more out of line. In part, this is due to the fact that New York is carrying hedges against the unsold stock and part of this is due to a lack of any speculative demand and the pessimistic view which has so long prevailed in the trade. Cotton and sugar are two commodities in which no advance has recently taken place and they would lend themselves to any speculative buying. In the case of cotton, it is difficult to see what will revive speculation, but it is generally believed the incentive will be found in the new crop. It is fairly obvious that trade will take care of the present supply at these prices but this is not in itself sufficient to attract outside buying. Liverpool futures are due tomorrow, March 12.92; May 13.01.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, January 12.—After starting 6 to 13 points higher, cottonseed oil reacted 8 to 10 points under heavy selling of May, which was attributed to refiners. Pit absorption was good, however, and the market subsequently rallied in response to higher lard and grains. Closing bids were 1 point higher to 2 net lower. Sales, 29,200 barrels. Tenders, 500 barrels. Prime crude, 9.50@9.75; prime summer yellow spot, 11.15. January closed 11.31; May, 11.62; July, 11.82, all bid.

Hog Sale Wednesday.

Thomasville, Ga., January 12.—(Special.)—The next cooperative hog sale for Thomas county will be held here Wednesday. County Agent Pat Ward says that hogs will bring higher prices this year than last and he is urging the farmers to raise even more of them, as they are a money-making crop.

The Investor

by PAUL WILLARD GARRETT

American Telephone and Telegraph Company's Funded Debt, Even Including the New $125,000,000 Bond Issue, Amounts to Only About a Quarter of Its Assets.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company has just completed a piece of financing that is attracting considerable attention. The company offered and the market immediately took $125,000,000 of thirty-five-year sinking fund 5 per cent debenture bonds at 95, or on a 5.30 per cent yield basis.

The new telephone issue in point of size tops all issues offered since about a year ago, when the Japanese loan was arranged, and is larger than the company's own issue of November, 1923. The latter was for $100,000,000. Comments were then made on the fact that 5 1-2 per cent bonds had sold at 98 1-2, or on a 5.68 per cent yield basis. The company is getting its new money at a pretty favorable rate.

Unique Position of A. T. & T. Bonds.

While the increased volume of investment funds has a great deal to do with the matter, American Telephone and Telegraph company's bonds, it should be remembered, occupy an unusual position. They command the confidence of our most critical utility investors.

One thing to bear in mind in connection with telephone bonds is that this great company in recent years has been reducing its ratio of bonds to stock. The new loan is a large one, but the company, since December 31, 1920, actually has increased its funded debt only $81,000,000, whereas it has increased its capital stock $457,000,000. American Telephone and Telegraph company's total funded debt, after giving effect to the new financing, will be less than $400,000,000, as compared with capital stock in excess of $900,000,000. This means that the company's funded debt will comprise only about 30 per cent of the total capital liabilities; on December 31, 1920, the debt comprised 42 per cent of such liabilities. Based on distinctly conservative valuations, the company's assets as of September 30, 1924, were carried on the books at $1,463,000,000, so that it is perfectly safe to say that the funded debt amounts to little more than a quarter of the book value of the property.

An Unusual Dividend Record.

The large amounts plowed back into surplus over a long period of years, greatly widening the company's earning base have been like extra bulwarks thrown up for the protection of bondholders. As a result, the amount that the company must earn on its total valuation to cover fixed charges is relatively small. The thought should comfort telephone bondholders, for the company's earnings have been growing in a substantial but steady fashion for years.

Ten years ago American Telephone and Telegraph company's net earnings available for interest charges were $40,557,977; in every year since then the amount has increased until in 1923 it reached $95,389,918. Interest charges in that period have also increased, of course, but not as rapidly as the amounts available to meet such charges; indeed, during the last three years annual interest charges have been reduced from $19,521,109 to $13,697,737. The latter figure is for 1923. It is estimated that in 1924 the company will show something like $105,000,000 available for interest requirements, or enough to cover 1924 charges more than six times. The amount is sufficient to cover interest charges on all bonds presently to be outstanding more than five times without taking account of earnings that will be derived from the investment of the new funds.

Technical Features of the Bonds.

The bonds mature January 1, 1960, interest being payable semi-annually each January and July. A sinking fund of $1,250,000 annually is to be set aside to purchase debentures, if obtainable, in the open market at not to exceed 102 1-2. The bonds are redeemable in whole or in part at 110 up to 1956; thereafter at par.

While nothing has been said about the matter, the reason that the bonds are callable at par during the last four years is rather obvious. The telephone company is anticipating that 1960 might happen to be a poor year in which to refund the loan at the most favorable rates. With a four-year leeway the company should be able to pick a favorable time for its refunding operations.

Your Income Tax

Furnished by Bureau of Internal Revenue, U. S. Treasury Department.

Reduction of the income tax was effected by the revenue act of 1924. A rate reduction, however, was not the only benefit afforded by this legislation. Increase in the exemption for married persons and heads of families, a 25 per cent reduction on "earned income," and other changes are of immediate interest to every taxpayer. As an aid, therefore, in the preparation of income tax returns for the year 1924, the bureau of internal revenue has prepared a series of articles on the new act and the regulations governing its administration, of which this is the first. The salaried man, wage-earner, professional and business man—in fact, every class of taxpayer—will be fully informed of their requirements and privileges. Taxpayers are advised to preserve these articles as a guide in the making of their returns.

Returns are required of every single person whose net income for 1924 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income of $5,000 or more and of every married person living with husband or wife whose net income was $2,500 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more. Divorcees or married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons. Married persons living together are required to file a return if their aggregate net income was $2,500 or more or the aggregate gross income was $5,000 or more.

Husband and wife living together may include the income of each in a single joint return, or each may file separate returns showing the income of each. Where a joint return is filed, the tax is computed on the aggregate income and all deductions and credits to which either is entitled is taken from such aggregate income.

If a wife does not file a separate return or join with her husband in a return, the husband is required to include in his return all income received by the wife in payment of wages, salary, or from the sale of products of her labor. In the returns of married persons must be included also the income of dependent minor children.

It should be remembered that a husband and wife living together need make no return unless their aggregate net income for 1924 was $2,500 or more or the aggregate gross income was $5,000 or more. Last year returns were required of such married persons whose aggregate net income was $2,000 or more.

There is no change in the exemption for single persons, which is $1,000. Married persons living together and heads of families are allowed by the revenue act of 1924 an exemption of $2,500, regardless of the amount of net income. Under the preceding act the exemption for married persons and heads of families was $2,500 if the aggregate net income was $5,000 or less and $2,000 if the net income exceeded $5,000. A husband and wife living together have but one personal exemption. If they make separate returns such exemption may be taken by either or divided between them.

The exemption of $2,500 is allowed married couples only if they live together. In the absence of continuous actual residence together, the exemption depends upon the character of the separation. The new regulations provide that if occasionally and temporarily a wife is away on a visit or a husband is away on business, the joint home being maintained, the full exemption is allowable. The unavoidable absence of a husband or wife at a sanitarium on account of illness does not preclude claiming the exemption. But if continuously and voluntarily the husband makes his residence at one place and the wife at another, they are not living together within the eyes of the income-tax law. Each must file a return if his or her income was $1,000 or more, and each is allowed only the $1,000 exemption granted a single person.

No change is made in the provision allowing the taxpayers, in addition to a personal exemption, a credit of $400 for each person depending upon him or her and receiving chief support, if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective. The term "mentally or physically defective" includes not only cripples and those mentally defective, but persons in ill-health and the aged. The $400 credit does not apply to the wife or husband of a taxpayer, though one may be totally dependent upon the other.

High Lights in Cotton Market

BY THEO. H. PRICE, Editor Commerce and Finance.

New York, January 12.—The most impressive thing about the cotton market last week was its steadiness. Prices were slightly lower one day and slightly higher the next, but the net change was small and the stability seems to indicate that supply and demand are nearly balanced.

In so far as American cotton is concerned this would appear to be the case. As a contrary interpretation has been put upon the figures that I recently published the following statement has been prepared for the information of those who are fond of statistics. For such it needs no exposition:

II. Estimated Production 1924-25

(a) Lint coton (See report of Dept. of Agric., Dec. 8, 1924) bales of 500 lbs. gross, average weight of the running bale being estimated at 499.8 lbs.		13,153,000
less quantity ginned prior to Aug. 1, 1924 (see Census report of Aug. 8, 1924		21,924	13,131,076
(b) Linters (See report of Dept. of Agric., Dec. 8, 1924) "The production of linters is about 5.5 per cent as much as the lint production; average 1918-1922" 5.5% on 13,153,000			723,415
Total supply of American cotton, including linters, for the season 1924-25			16,693,217

In order to compare the foregoing presentation with that given by the department of agriculture on December 31, 1924, and showing a supply of American lint cotton of 16,080,000 bales, it will be necessary to deduct from my figures about 900,000 bales of linters (158,436 in the carry-over, 723,415 in the production and some 18,000 bales in foreign mill and port stocks). This would reduce my figures to 15,800,000 bales of American lint cotton. The difference of 280,000 bales between my figures and those of the department of agriculture would seem to represent the customary allowance for "excess of distribution over supply," due to city crop, understatements in ginning returns, etc.

Adding this allowance to my figures the total season's supply of American cotton, including linteres, would be 16,973,000 bales

The consumption for the season including linteres, is variously estimated at from 11,900,000 to 13,000,000 bales. Taking the larger estimate of 13,000,000 bales

The indicated world's carry-over of American would be 3,973,00 bales which is only 1,140,000 bales more than the unconsumed supply 2,838,000 bales at the end of last season's cotton famine.

The carry-over will of course be larger if this season's crop exceeds the government estimate or the consumption is less than 13,000,000 bales, but four millon or even five million bales distributed all over the world will not be burdensome and if a deficient crop next season should be indicated most of it would be speedily tucked away by the manufacturers who realize that as one swallow does not make a summer so one fair-sized yield will not supply two years' consumption.

In the light of these figures any important change in the price level seems improbable until public opinion regarding the size of the next crop commences to take definite shape. The high prices at which corn and wheat are selling would appear to make a reduction in the cotton acreage entirely logical but no precise information on this phase of the subject will be available for at least two months and meanwhile the market would seem to be securely anchored around 25 cents.

The supply is sufficient but not excessive and the price is probably as near intrinsic value as is possible in the case of a commodity like cotton that is subject to so many conflicting influences.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM

Wall Street Expects Railroad Earnings Statements for December to make good showing.

New York, January 12.—Speculative Wall street was disappointed in the way the stock market acted early in the day but this disappointment disappeared. With the steel corporation reporting an increase of 784,707 tons in unfilled orders, after the close of the stock market Saturday, a much larger increase than was expected, naturally speculative Wall street expected the stock market would boil this morning. It did not. In the early trading the price movement was irregular. But before noon the upward movement was resumed with the oils and steel shares leading. Steel common made a new high for this movement which is the highest point touched since 1917.

Call money opened today at three per cent. No change occurred in time money rates.

New highs for this movement were made today in lead and zinc selling prices.

General Electric reports for the December quarter new business booked to the amount of $80,000,000. This is an increase of 7 per cent over the same period of last year. For the full 12 months of 1924 new bookings amounted to $283,107,000, a loss compared with 1923 of 7 per cent. Until general trade began to pick up slowly in the late summer it was believed that General Electric would show for 1924 a loss of 12 to 15 per cent in new orders received compared with 1923. For the September quarter there was a loss of 11 per cent compared with the corresponding period of 1923 and for the June quarter the shrinkage was 15 per cent.

No talk was heard here today of gold exports. Since the outward flow of the yellow metal began around the first of December exports have mounted to $68,000,000 of which $25,000,000 has gone out since the beginning of 1925 and $11,250,000 within the past week. Our gold supply still amounts to $4,500,000,000, or half of that of the whole world; nevertheless the outward movement cannot continue at the rate established since December 1, without making a change in our money market.

Wall street is expecting the railroad earnings statement for December to be published shortly to make a good showing. In this connection it is being pointed out that earnings for December of 1923 were unfavorable while those for the same month of 1924, judging from the published carloading statements, will be favorable. The contrast of a good month with a poor one should make the carriers finish 1924 in fine form.

Washington reports received here today stated that the federal reserve board while not likely to increase rediscount rates in the near future might take other action to show its disapproval of loud "exuberance" stockmarketwise, fearing that stock market inflation would injure a return of normal business conditions. This Washington information stated that what the federal reserve board might urge was sale of government securities by the federal reserve banks, thus finding employment for money which otherwise would be used in carrying on stock market speculation.

The best informed banking people here do not credit these Washington rumors. Conservative bankers are cautioning their friends against further activities in the stock market until a real setback in prices has occurred. Nevertheless, with cotton and grain paper now being paid off and with general trade not making increased demands on the money market it is felt that the federal reserve banks are more likely to buy government securities in the near future than to sell them in the open market as they are now paying dividends out of the surplus.

Advances Scored Despite Higher Call Money Rates

NEW HIGHS SEEN IN WHEAT MARKET

Chicago, January 12.—Accelerated by an unexpected big decrease of the United States visible supply of wheat and by a lively demand from domestic millers, the wheat market today climbed to the highest prices this season, May delivery touching 1.85. Closing quotations on wheat were strong, at 7-8 to 4 1-4 net advance; May, 1.84 3-4 to 1.85, and July, 1.56 1-8 to 1.56 1.4. Corn finished 7-8 to 1 5-8 up; oats varying from 1-8 off to 1-4 gain, and provisions 7 to 27c higher.

With the domestic stock of wheat showing a reduction of more than 4,500,000 bushels in the last week, closing prices were at the day's topmost level. Even before the visible supply figures were out, there was persistent general buying based largely on reports that millers had paid $2.00 a bushel and over for immediate delivery of wheat at Omaha, St. Louis, Minneapolis and Toledo. In addition to the milling demand, there was evidence that considerable export business was in progress. Besides, advices were at hand that wheat stocks in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Vienna would soon be exhausted.

Numerous reactions, due to profit taking sales, impeded the wheat advance at times, but the offerings were readily absorbed and each subsequent rally carried the market higher than before. Advocates of higher prices for wheat gave special emphasis today to milling trade reports that flour business was broadening. In this connection it was asserted that the domestic wheat situation is attracting more attention than the foreign at the present time.

Corn sympathized with wheat strength notwithstanding a liberal increase of the corn visible supply. Oats were sluggish in the absence of any important call from shippers.

Provisions reflected upturns in the value of hogs and corn.

Grain Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, May 12.—WHEAT—May advanced to a new high for the crop and later deliveries made fair gains on continued buying by leading holders. Strength in the domestic milling situation and lack of important selling pressure, as much as anything was responsible for the advance. The United States visible decreased 4,659,000 bushels for the week. Seaboard reported everybody doing export business, but gave no idea of total amount done. The situation in wheat continues to develop strength on the bull side with cash premiums advancing. We see nothing in the situation to change our views that higher prices will rule ultimately.

CORN—Trade largely local and influenced chiefly by the action of wheat. Locals bought while commission houses appeared to have orders to sell on bulges. Cash demand slow and trading basis weak to two cents off. It will probably be difficult to bring about any sustained advance in corn at present, due to the poor cash market, but there is a noticeable improvement in the class of buying the past few days.

OATS—Held within narrow range. There was buying by leading commission houses, but it served only to absorb the scattered offerings and kept market on firm basis with little change from the previous close.

RYE—Buying was led by houses with seaboard and foreign connections. Selling was confined to profit-taking on the way up.

PROVISIONS—Packing and cash interests sold early, but new investment buying developed and the market advanced in sympathy with grains. Hogs closed 25 cents up with top $11.05.

SUGGESTION MADE UNCLE SAM ENTER WHISKY BUSINESS

Washington, January 12.—A suggestion that Uncle Sam go into the whisky business to protect both himself and the present holder of intoxicants has been made to the senate investigating committee by James J. Britt, counsel for the prohibition enforcement unit.

"My own view," Mr. Britt said, "is that both in the interest of prohibition and in justice to the rights of the holders, the government should issue some sort of certificates or bonds which ultimately would not cost it a penny, and take over the liquor and have charge of the disposition of it."

The suggestion came after attention had been called by committeemen that the distillers had complained they were obliged to pay a heavy revenue tax to the government, but were unable to dispose readily of the liquor under prohibition.

"BIG BILL" THOMPSON ANNOUNCES FOR MAYOR

Springfield, Ill., January 12.—William H. "Big Bill" Thompson, twice mayor of Chicago, today announced his candidacy for mayor in 1927. The announcement was made at a big round-up of his friends who came to Springfield on the "Big Bill Special" to attend the inaugural ceremonies.

The call for Thompson to again run for office for mayor was made by Attorney P. H. O'Donnell, who has been aiding Governor Small in the civil suits against the governor in the circuit court.

New York, January 12.—Higher call money rates brought about some irregularity in today's early stock trading, but the general list soon swung upward under the leadership of U. S. Steel common, which crossed 125 to its highest price since 1917. Total sales slightly exceeded 2,000,000 shares.

The unexpectedly large increase of 780,000 tons in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation, which was not announced until after the market closed Saturday, brought a large volume of buying orders into that issue, which opened 1-4 higher at 124 1-4. Many traders had expected a larger initial advance with the result that heavy profit-taking and bear selling came into the market, forcing the stock off a point from its early high. All offerings were well absorbed, however, and steady accumulation by powerful financial interests soon sent the price to 125 3-8, where it closed.

Unexpected strength also developed in some of the motor issues with buying influenced to some extent by the impressions obtained at the automobile show here last week. General Motors opened with a block of 6,800 shares at 70, up 1, and later extended its gain to 73 1-8, closing at 73 for a net gain of 4 points on the day. Nash Motors continued its sensational advance by touching a new top at 220 1-2, a net gain of 10 1-2 points, in further reflection of the increased dividend payments. Fisher Body soared 20 points to 280 and then fell back to 272. Other strong spots in the automotive group were Bosch Magneto and Stewart Warner.

Oil shares also developed a sudden burst of strength and activity with Marland, the leader in that group, climbing nearly 4 points to 44. Trading in this stock was stimulated by reports that strong banking interests would soon exercise an option to purchase a large block of the shares. Indications that earnings of the Pan-American Petroleum company would be substantially higher in 1925 than last year, brought a moderate advance in these issues. Sinclair preferred moved up 2 1-8 points to 84 5-8 and Skelly Oil advanced 1 1-4 to 25 1-2.

Missouri Pacific preferred was one of the leaders in the railroad group, responding to the announcement of Chairman Williams that 1924 earnings on the stock this year would be approximately $9 a share compared with 16 cents a share in the preceding year.

Recent improvement in the financial position of the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad coupled with reports that the company was preparing to make interest payments on some of its bonds, lifted the preferred stock 3 points to a new high at 60. Profit-taking retarded the upward movement in other rail issues.

Money rates stiffened slightly, call loans renewing at 3 per cent and holding at that figure all day, as loans were called to bolster up the reserve of banks after the deficit shown in last week's clearing house statement. The demand for time funds was light, with only small amounts available at less than 3 3-4 per cent and with longer term accommodations quoted at 4 per cent. Commercial paper rates ranged from 3 3-4 to 4 per cent.

Foreign exchanges were firm, although sterling failed to make further headway in its approach toward par. After selling above 4.79 it closed slightly below this figure, showing little change for the day. French francs moved up slightly to around 5.37c, but Dutch guilders continued to decline.

DAWES PLAN OFFICERS GATHERING IN PARIS

Paris, January 12.—All the organizations provided for under the Dawes plan are gathering in Paris for what promises, to use the words of Seymour Parker Gilbert, Jr., agent general for reparations, who arrived in Paris today from Berlin, "one of the most important weeks in the execution of the Dawes plan since it went into force."

The Dawes plan will take the center of the reparations stage immediately after the finance ministers make their exit from the scene. The first meeting of the Dawes plan offiicals has been called for Wednesday, when all the commissioners and trustees appointed under the plan will meet under the chairmanship of Mr. Gilbert.

On Thursday Mr. Gilbert will preside over the meeting of the transfer committee, which includes Joseph E. Sterrett, of New York, representing the United States. The trustees of the German loan, Mr. Gilbert, Dean Jay, of the Morgan-Harjes bank in Paris, and M. Termeulen, of Holland, will hold a meeting later in the week.

The coordinating board, when it meets Wednesday, expects to have before it the official protocol of settlement concluded by the conference of finance ministers and to study its adoption to the future execution of the Dawes plan.

TONE UNSETTLED IN CURB MARKET

New York, January 12.—Profit taking unsettled curb market trading today, although individual stocks showed pronounced strength. The oils were the strongest group, while several radio issues and the public utilities yielded to liquidation.

Several of the oils advanced to higher ground, South Pennsylvania Oil gaining 3 points, Prairie Oil and Gas 1 1-2, Ohio Oil 1 1-8, and Imperial of Canada 1 1-4. Losses in this group were chiefly fractional, Prairie Pipe yielding a point.

Heavy buying of Freshman Radio featured the radio list, but early gains were reduced by profit taking. Dubilier advanced 2 points and Thormydyne 1 1-8. Others lacked resistance to realizing sales.

Nickel Plate common shares sold off a point. The industrials, with the exception of Duz corporation, which gained nearly 2 points, managed to hold their ground, while American Gas and Electric lost 2 3-4 and American Power and Light declined 1 1-2.

Total bond sales, par value, $15,225,000.

New York, January 12.—Renewed buying of railroad bonds on a large scale featured today's active bond trading, which expanded under the influence of continued easier time money rates and a growing reinvestment in them. Total sales exceeded $20,000,000, placing the session in a class with some of last year's largest daily markets.

A sharp rally in the new Denver & Rio Grande general 5s, which carried the price up almost 5 points to a new high above 66, followed reports that the company was preparing to pay interest on the issue, which is cumulative from February 1, 1924. Other bonds and certificates of the road also scored substantial gains.

Demand for other rail liens embraced Delaware & Hudson Convertible 5s, which moved up 2 points; Peoria & Eastern Income 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio Convertible 5s, Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s, Atchison General 4s, Atlantic Coast Line 4s and Norfolk & Western Consolidated 4s.

Trading in the local issues was stimulated by reports that the reorganization plan of the New York Railways company would go into effect within a month. The company's 4 per cent certificates moved up to a new high at 47 7-8, carrying with them the issues of the other transit lines. Federal Light and Traction extended their recent remarkable gains by 3 points and Commonwealth Power preferred advanced a point. Sinclair 6 1-2s, gaining 1 5-8 points, led an upward movement in the oil bonds, which was in line with a spurt in the stocks of these companies.

The $3,000,000 loan recently negotiated for the city of Saarbruecken soon will be offered in the form of a 10-year 7 per cent bond. Offerings of $15,000,000 Public Service Electric and Gas company 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock is being made at a price of $95 a share.

HEAVY WELDING STEEL is now quoted at $20.50 to $21 a ton in the Chicago market. This is an advance of over 50c a ton over recent prices. "Scrap" steel is recognized by experts in this line as being one of the most reliable barometers forecasting the future trend of business in the steel industry.

MARLAND OIL is reported to have contracted to deliver 18,000,000 barrels of crude oil in 1925, which quantity will probably be increased by 7,000,000 barrels, making a total of 25,000,000 barrels to be delivered this year at prices prevailing when deliveries are made. Rising prices for crude oil are anticipated very soon after the peak of production has been reached for the Wortham pool and Marland will benefit immediately through the appreciation of its inventory of about 5,570,000 barrels of high-grade, mid-continent crude.

Red Hair and Blue Sea

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

SYNOPSIS.

Palmyra Tree, on board the yacht Rainbow, which is leaving the California coast for the South seas, is startled to see a sinewy hand with a black lace mitt on it thrust through her porthole window. Palmyra is loved by two men, John Thurston and Van Buren Rutger. She is not certain which she loves.

Palmyra determines to unearth the owner of that sinister hand. She discovers Ponape Burke, who confesses he is a smuggler of coolies. Burke permits her a glimpse of a savage brown man, Olive, hiding with him.

Palmyra gradually convinces herself she is in love with Van Buren Rutger. Burke and Olive leave the yacht at Honolulu, and Palmyra's engagement to Van Buren is announced. The yacht Rainbow is wrecked. The party lands on an uninhabited island. Burke appears on the Pigeon of Noah, and promises to rescue them. Palmyra goes on board alone to investigate, and finds herself a prisoner. Burke sails away with her, telling her it was he who wrecked the Rainbow. Thurston and Van Buren start at dawn in vain pursuit. Burke grows ugly at Palmyra's refusal to listen to his lovemaking, and leaves her alone on a deserted island with barely enough food to last until he shall return to her.

In the morning she sees Olive, the brown man, swimming toward her. Exhausted from a long swim, he falls asleep. When he awakens, he attempts sign language. Finally he communicates to her the idea that he and she are to swim away together in the limitless sea. Making her a life preserver of coconut husks, they start their trip across the empty ocean. They rest at night on a barren beach. Palmyra manages to send a message for help, and again they start their ocean journey. Burke's ship is again seen in pursuit of them. By clever maneuvering Olive eludes it. A ship is sighted at last. It is the imperial Japanese gunboat with Thurston and Van Buren aboard and Commander Sakamoto in command. Olive's signals fail to reach the men in the gunboat, and they pass on without observing the tragic pair in the canoe. Olive is caught by a clam, and death threatens him. He kills the clam, and they sail on.

INSTALLMENT XLIV.

A STRUGGLE TO THE DEATH.

Stealthily, now, there came slipping along the skyline two needle points of mast and a twinkle of canvas in the morning sun. Olive grunted savagely and snapped his great square teeth together. The girl seized her paddle.

Landed with his feet upon the shark's back.

But even in this moment of fear he found time to point quizzically at the blade, then toward the Lupe-a-Noa. If she chose to flash the wet wood in signal now, Ponape Burke would see and come to rescue. The girls' answer was to work the paddle with doubled vigor.

And presently the schooner had passed them by, unseeing. Palmyra laughed stridently in relief. But her companion's grin had an anxious twist.

Again the topmasts appeared. Burke was standing grimly off and on between them and their haven. He had now, as ill luck would have it caught them near the angle of his course as the Pigeon of Noah came about. He had passed them far to starboard; soon he would have them to port, and close.

Olive snatched down sail and mast. He lashed them flat. With a glance he assured himself everything aboard was secure. Then, paddle in hand, he kept their craft to the hollow of the seas.

But on, on came the topmasts, the topsails, rising against the sky. The girl gasped in terror. On came the sails, on and on, nearer and nearer, taller and more definite—more greatly to be dreaded.

And then, in this awful moment, without word of warning, Olive sprang overboard. Palmyra uttered a wail. After all he had braved, to forsake her now? To seek his own safety in flight? No! It was unthinkable!

And scarcely the unworthy thought, than the brown man's hand shot up, seized the outrigger, gave one twist. The next second Palmyra was floundering in the water, the canoe capsized.

With a stroke, the savage reached out and caught her by the hair. As a kitten held in its mother's teeth, she ceased to struggle. With another stroke he recaptured the canoe, bottom up. He put his foot on the outrigger, tilted the hull so the imprisoned air escaped. With one arm he bore down upon the canoe, their combined weight, to sink it and control its motion. The other arm held the girl, submerged, so that she choked and fought for breath.

Thus they waited, Palmyra hardly hoping to live. Eternity grew old in that long drawn strangling suspense. The girl could not see. But she pictured the schooner, coming on, towering at last above them, the white man leering down in triumph.

But when emotion had become unendurable, when it seemed she must tear herself free, she felt, all at once, incredibly, that the great torso against which her head was pressed in viselike grip, vibrated, shook with an infantile giggle.

On, on the Lupe-a-Noa indeed had come, nearer and nearer—but not too near. Careening under its spread of sail it had been unbelievably close and then, all unknowning, had flown away. Ponape Burke, with his binoculars, had glared straight over them in his scrutiny of the more distant sea.

The brown amphibian, gradually relaxing his caution, first gave the girl a better chance to breathe. Then he righted the canoe. He unlashed its gear, rolled the mast, spirits, paddles into a bundle. These he placed under the girl's chin in the water, and let her go. She understood now why he had always kept everything lashed fast: that nothing should float free to catch Burke's eye.

As she rose and fell, gripping her life preserver, Palmyra wondered whether their situation might not be desperate. In filling the canoe to escape the white man, Olive had saved them from one crisis only to throw them into another.

But the islander appeared to take no such dark view. Rather, he was in high good spirits. Seizing the craft with both hands, himself sitting up to the neck in the sea as one might in a chair, except that his legs fanned methodically back and forth across beneath him, he shot the canoe forward, then aft, then forward again. At each stop a part of the brine within gushed over prow or stern. With the bailer Olive quickly completed his work.

He placed the girl's hand on the now buoyant canoe, returned its gear, lifted himself up and in. He had stopped for the more difficult task of hauling Palmyra aboard when, startlingly, he let go his hold with a guttural cry.

She turned frightened eyes over her shoulder, then screamed. For there, cutting the surface, a little jet of spray rising from its edge, was another sail—the dreadful lateen of a shark!

The man eater was almost upon her. Frantic, she turned her eyes to Olive. There he stood, for the first time at fault. His hand, with lightning instinct, had flown to the sheath on his belt, found it empty. The girl saw that, in throwing his knife away, she had made her own death certain.

But instantly now, the savage rallied. Only for a second did paralyzing discovery unnerve him. The shark had all but seized its victim. A moment and action would be too late. But in that flash the man leaped, landed with his feet upon the shark's back. The impact threw the monster into brief panic.

The girl, by some miracle of fright, clambered into the canoe, half filling it. Olive, availing himself of the one chance, could have followed. But the canoe would not now support them both. With an agony of appeal he looked up at her, held out his hand. The shark was returning to the charge.

But she understood. Thank God, she understood. Forgot now was all his manual, but she knew. She tore at her dress, thrust out the knife. He snatched it; dived.

The girl's hands flew to her eyes. She could not watch this man torn to pieces. He had saved her life once again, only to lose it with his own. For, left alone in the canoe, death was inevitable.

Only by the grace of a second or so had she got the knife into those sinewy fingers. But before she could close her eyes, she was aware that Olive's grin had returned with the touch of the steel. And when a horrid compulsion forced her to look again, she could see the smile even beneath the water.

So close the shark, Olive had sounded instantly. As his feet left the surface, the fish shot across the place like a torpedo. Then the man rose to air beyond, grinning reassurance.

The shark turned to charge once more. The islander waited. A groan broke from the girl's lips. But just as the man eater made to seize its prey, Olive dropped below the surface. The heavy fish had no chance to stop. As it swept over his head the savage thrust upward the knife in a lunge that reached the heart.

Palmyra's knees wilted under her, and she slumped into the half filled canoe. But this time she must bear a part. The shark might be only wounded. She reached blindly for the scoop. She must bail, bail, bail.

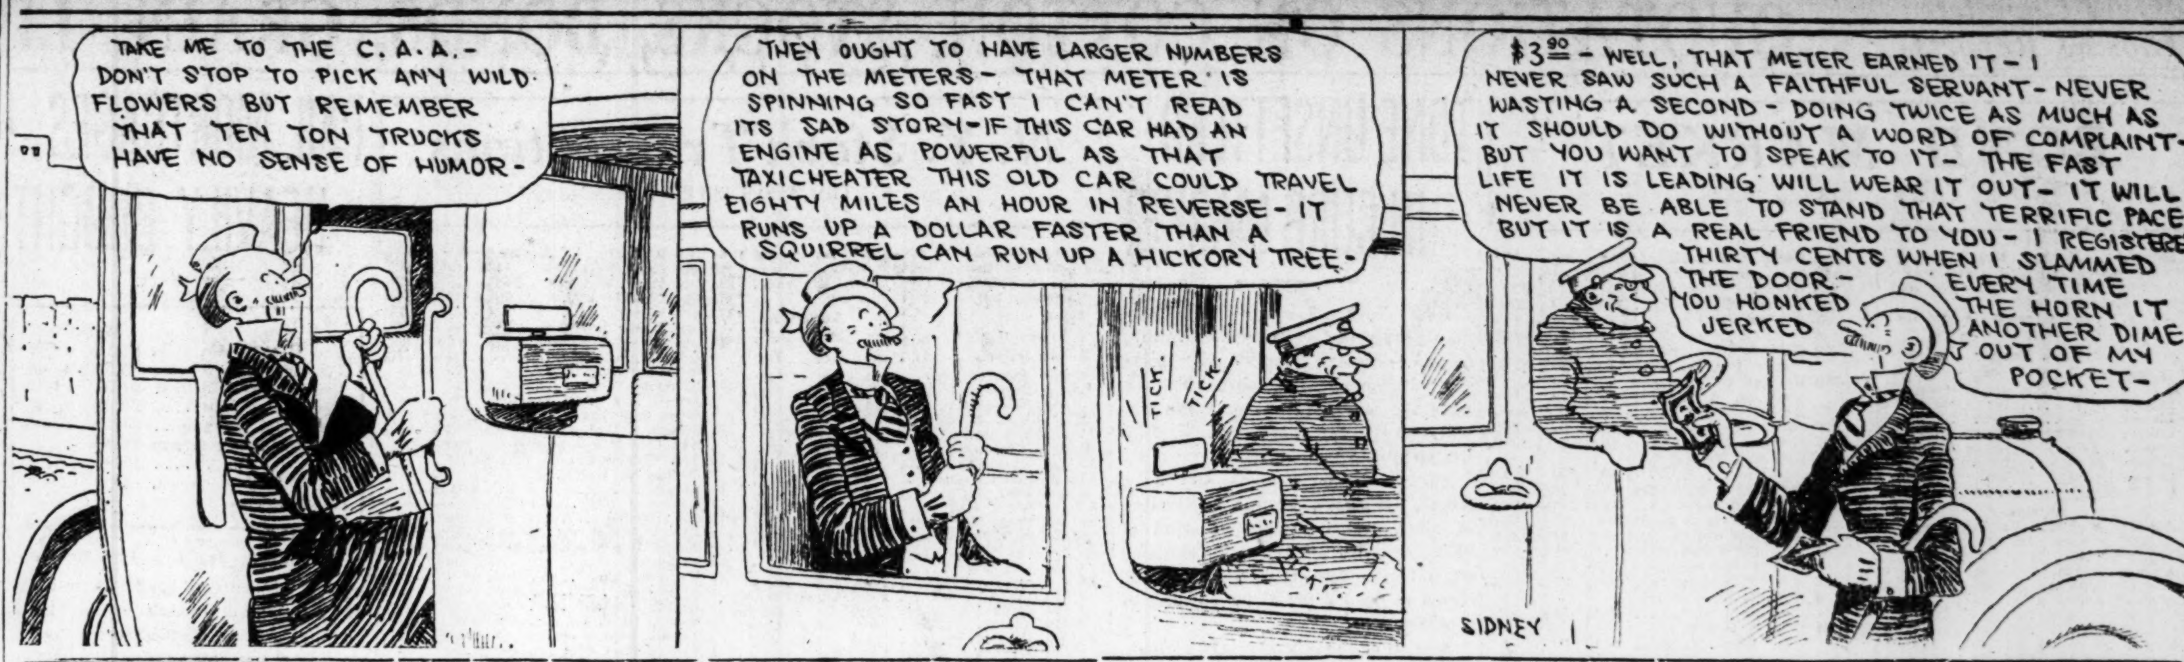

And then, beside her craft, there appeared an unemotional brown face, the knife between its teeth tinged with blood. Steady handed, he took from her trembling fingers the scoop, quickly cleared the canoe, lifted himself aboard.

The girl looked back at the water, and found it red. With other sharks hurrying to feed, no place now for even this amphibian.

The Fun Shop

HOW TO WRITE JOKES.

Construction.

Read carefully today's and succeeding days' FUN SHOP. Notice the way in which the jokes are constructed. Some are in short, prose form; others are set up in question and answer style.

THESE JOKES ARE THE KIND ACCEPTED BY FUN SHOP.

Moral: Build your jokes accordingly. Do not have them set up in a careless, hit or miss manner.

Be sure there is a laugh in what you write. The mere recital of an incident is not funny. There must be a laugh in the incident itself. You must express that laugh in a terse, snappy way.

Do not smother the point of your joke with words. Do not drag it. The FUN SHOPPERS want to laugh. Help them do so quickly.

Tomorrow—Seeing Jokes.

I'M IN LOVE!

By Webster M. Bannock.

I take my pen in hand
And twang my blooming lyre;
I sing to beat the band,
My voice goes high and higher.
I know I ought to work
At money-grabbing labors;
Instead of that I shirk
And nauseate my neighbors.

I sing for all I'm worth,
I cut up antics stupid,
I feel I own the earth,
And all because Dan Cupid
Has shot me with his dart
And made me love a girlie;
She's given me her heart,
Hence all this hurly burly.

I'm traveling on air
And do not care who knows it;
I drink with all who dare;
I'm hoarse from shouting "Prosit!"
So up and down the land
I twang my tuneful lyre;
I am a burning brand!
With love I am afire!

Naturally.

Upton: "Kathryn is a live wire, isn't she?"

Walsh: "I guess so. Members of her own sex consider her shocking."

—W. H. Herrmann.

A Tongue-Twister.

Captain Yonsen sailed from Dorking,
He was a viking, he was corking,
He was a sea king, handsome, striking—
And he sailed for the port of Haaking.
Just when the Haaking ice was breaking.

Haaking folks were merry-making
Out in the fields behind the dyking,
With their May queen, Tilda Hocking,
And her beau, Dick King, as May King.

Yonson, that old Dorking viking,
Had a liking for Miss Hocking,
And came hiking there to Haaking
To break up their merry-making.
"You are no king—I'm a sea king,"
He told beau King, "I'm not joking."
Then the viking striking Dick King,
Gave that May King hick a licking;
What a shocking viking sea king!
With Miss Hocking we went streaking!

—Marjorie Maxine Marshall.

A Magnate.

Louise: "What do you know about it, dearie? That half basked sheik told me that he was an oil king."

Lois: "Tell him to quit his kidding! The only oil about him is that stuff on his hair."

—Mrs. Charles Wayman.

Just Found It Out.

Leonie: "I wish to get a divorce. My husband has the most terrible manners."

Lawyer: "Why did you not come to me before?"

—C. R. Snyder.

THE TRICKY TRIOLET COUNTER

He Got It.

Her Dad came down the stair
With features firmly set.
The fellow had a scare
When Dad came down the stair;
'Twas twelve—he still was there,
And wondered what he'd get.
Her Dad came down the stair—
And bummed a cigarette.

—C. H. Hogg.

True Courtesy.

I asked her to dance,
Though she weighed a whole lot;
You'd say, at a glance,
When I asked her to dance
That I took a big chance
In a waltz or fox trot.
I asked her to dance,—

—Irene Temple.

The "English" Lesson!

Berry: "I suppose you help your boy with his school lessons every evening?"

Sterry: "Well, yes, in a way. I keep him pretty busy hunting up words in the dictionary for our cross-word puzzles."

—E. L. Lynch.

"I'm afraid," sighed the man whose wife like to dress well, "this 'pin' money is a stick-up' game."

In delightful contrast to the elaborate parties, with their lavish display of elegance and beauty, given during the holiday season for lovely debutantes and visitors, will be the unique and enjoyable "tacky party" at which Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme will entertain this evening for their beautiful debutante daughter, Miss Callie Orme. It is difficult to imagine the stylish group of this year's debutantes clothed in any other costumes than the smartest and most beautiful designed by Atlanta's fashionable modistes, but tonight they will appear in grotesque and ludicrous attire.

Miss Lucy Elizabeth Harper, another of the charming "debs," will be central figure at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Godfrey MacDonald. The tea-dance this afternoon at the Atlanta Biltmore will assemble many large parties. Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, will be honored by Mrs. W. D. Ellis, Jr., and Miss Margaret McGowan, of Augusta, Ga., will be entertained by Edward Merritt.

Rivaling these important social events will be the concert this evening to be given by Frederick Gunster, American concert tenor, at Egleston Memorial hall, under the auspices of the woman's auxiliary of Grady hospital, of which Mrs. Frank C. Pogue is president.

The "Grandmothers' Club," including a group of Atlanta's most prominent matrons, will be entertained today by Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, in compliment to Mrs. George McCarty.

Debutante To Be Feted At Dance on Wednesday.

An event of the midweek will be the party at which Mr. and Mrs. George McCarty will entertain at the Biltmore dinner-dance on Wednesday, complimenting Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, an attractive debutante of the season.

Guests will include a group of the younger social set.

Children's Matinee Features Lee's Birthday.

Lee's birthday will be celebrated in fitting style by the young people attending the children's matinee at the Howard theater Saturday morning, when the Better Film's committee of Atlanta will give its usual Saturday matinee at 9:30 o'clock.

In answer to the invitation of Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman of the children's matinees, the enthusiastic cooperation of the Atlanta Daughters of the Confederacy and of the Stone Mountain Memorial association has been secured and officers of both of these associations will occupy boxes at the Saturday performance. In addition, the children, thousands of whom are members of the children's founders roll of the Stone Mountain Memorial association, are especially asked to attend and also wear their enrollment medals.

The feature picture selected by Mrs. Wing for Saturday is "Daddies" with Jackie Coogan in the stellar role. Jackie is perhaps the most popular of all film stars with the children, and this picture is one of his most appealing, depicting him as a neglected little genius of the violin, with a combinatio of mirth and pathos.

Those who are interested in the history of Stone Mountain, and they are legion, will be delighted to witness Saturday the work which has been done to make this one of the greatest wonders of all times. Pictures depicting the work of the artist Borglum, from the beginning have been loaned by the Stone Mountain Memorial association to be shown Saturday, and will doubtless attract a large number of visitors to the city also.

A beautiful prologue, selected by Miss Enloe will add to the interest of the occasion. Mrs. W. L. McCalley will have charge of the chaperonage.

Supper To Be Given on Lee's Birthday.

On General Robert E. Lee's birthday, Monday, January 19, the members of the Alumni Association of the Kappa Alpha fraternity will entertain with a supper at the Capital City club.

The feature of this celebration will be the private showing of "Dixie," a picture which gives in detail the life of Robert E. Lee and the effect and influence of this beloved southerner upon the Confederacy. This picture is being shown privately at this meeting to Kappa Alphas because of the close feeling that links the life of this leader of the Confederate cause so inseparably with the Kappa Alpha fraternity. This picture has never been south before and the showing is limited entirely to the members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

The customary address on this occasion will be done away with and this picture, along with other entertainments, will constitute the program.

Supper will be served, after which the annual election of officers will be held.

This meeting of Kappa Alpha and this celebration is an annual event and traditionally informal.

All Kappa Alphas are cordially invited to attend this meeting. For details concerning reservation, call Dan Smith, secretary, at the Adair Realty & Trust company.

Mrs. Martha Adams, of Washington, D. C., gave a talk on "Glimpses of Washington Social Life," and Mrs. H. C. Carnes spoke on "Thrift."

Plans were discussed for the dedication of the new building, which will take place in the early spring.

Following the business of the afternoon, a social hour was enjoyed.

Reserve Officers of Tech Honor Chaperones.

An interesting feature of Monday afternoon was the full-dress parade on Grant field at 4 o'clock by the Reserve Officers' training corps in honor of their chaperons.

After the review Mrs. Theo M. Chase, wife of Major Chase, in charge of the artillery unit, entertained all the cadet officers of the second battalion, for which she is the official chaperon, and the young ladies sponsors at tea.

The crimson color of the artillery was carried out in all the details, lovely American Beauty roses being the chosen flower.

All students of the scriptures as well as all progressive psychological students and teachers will be interested in this lecture and are invited to attend.

Committee of Better Homes To Sponsor Lectures on Linen

In broadening its educational program to include lectures on textiles, the Atlanta better homes committee, Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman, takes pleasure in announcing a series of four lectures on the subject of linens, to be given at the linen department of M. Rich & Bros. Co.

The lectures, to be given by Miss Leila Bunce, a well-known authority on home economics, who has been selected by Mrs. Wing for this important work, will include the selection, various uses of linens, and their care and will be accompanied by beautiful demonstrations.

In addition to the annual better homes exhibits, the committee urges every member to make as intensive a study of furniture and equipment of the home as possible. These lectures on textiles covering quality and texture, as well as usage and care of linens, will be a means of enabling the homemaker to select with greater skill and greater economy the household linens for her "better home."

The first lecture will be Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock in the linen department at M. Rich & Bros. Co (second floor to the right), and will be on the linens used at parties and various functions.

The public is invited to attend all four of these lectures since the four will have interdependent phases of textile information. It will be wise for all attending the lectures to bring notebooks and pencils.

After the first lecture on Wednesday for which invitations have already been mailed, a "linen tea" in honor of the better homes committee will be given in the tea room on the sixth floor. Admission to this tea with a more intimate showing of linens for special functions will be by card only.

Diminutive badges of linen bearing the words "Linen T Hostess" will be worn by the following members of the reception committee invited by Mrs. Wing: Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman; Mrs. George Howsmon, president P.-T. A. council; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, state federation director for Georgia; Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, treasurer Atlanta better homes committee; Mrs. J. H. Lorenz, secretary Atlanta better homes committee; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president Fifth District Federated Women's Clubs; Mrs Norman Sharp, president Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. George Wight, president Atlanta Music club, and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president City Federation of Woman's Clubs.

FRANCHISE TAX LAW DECLARED INVALID

Washington, January 12.—Missouri's franchise tax law as applied to foreign corporations doing business within its borders was held unconstitutional and invalid today by the supreme court.

The Ozark Pipe Line Corporation of Maryland contended that its business was the transportation of crude petroleum from Cushing, Okla., to Wood River, Ills., and that it was not subject to the tax because it did no business within Missouri. The lower courts decided against the company and the decision today reversed them.

Division No. 1 of West End Woman's Club Wins Loving Cup in Fund-Raising Contest

Mrs. Chester Johnson (extreme right), second vice president and chairman of the building committee of the West End Woman's club, is seen presenting the silver loving cup to division No. 1 of the building committee, which consists of, reading from left to right, Mrs. R. C. Roberts, Mrs. Lutie Manry and Mrs. W. O. Petty. Mrs. Harry Helmer, another member of the committee, is not in the picture.

The women of the West End Women's club are actively engaged in securing the amount of money necessary for the erection of the new club house on Cascade road. The beautiful elevated lot, 250 feet on Cascade avenue and 347 feet on Catawba circle, was donated July 6, 1924, by Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Razsdale.

The plans selected by the club for the building consist of a large auditorium, terraced porches, spacious parlor and committee rooms, complete kitchen and dining room, and last, but not least, a smoking room for the sustaining members.

The landscape gardener, Mr. Odom, has completed plans for the yard and driveways that greatly enhance the beauty of the lot. A feature of the garden is a collection of native Georgia flowers and shrubs.

To stimulate interest in the work W. F. Brandt, a sustaining member, presented the club, August 6, 1924, a silver loving cup, to go to the committee securing the largest amount of money for the building fund by January 1, 1925. This much-coveted honor was won by Division No. 1 of the building committee, consisting of Mrs. W. O. Petty, chairman; Mrs. Luta Maury, Mrs. Harry Helmer and Mrs. R. C. Roberts. The names of the entire committee have been engraved on the cup. They will keep the cup three months, at which time it will go to the committee securing the largest amount of money during the intervening time, but only the committee and the name of the chairman will be placed on the cup in the future.

April 1 a club dinner will be given in honor of the winning committee, and the cup presented to their chairman by Mrs. Chester Johnson, chairman of the building committee.

The Tea Room, at 134 Peachtree, under the auspices of a special tea-room committee consisting of Mrs. Jeff Wright, Mrs. H. H. Turner and Mrs. Sidney Smith, is proving a great asset to the club. This committee is assisted each week by the different standing committees. An unusually attractive menu has been arranged this week by Mrs. Fred Johnson, chairman of the home economics committee.

The attractive orange and mahogany furnishings, is part of the equipment to be used in the terraced dining room of the new clubhouse.

Another activity that is assisting the building committee materially is the series of dances sponsored by Mrs. Chester Johnson, second vice president. The dances are by invitation and are proving a popular gathering place for the young people of West End and their friends.

No department of the club has failed to contribute liberally to the building fund, but by exhibits, benefit bridges, concerts and personal donations have made it possible for the building to be erected according to the plans of the architect as soon as the grading and paving to be done by the county is complete.

Robertson-Stow Wedding Plans Are of Interest

Interest centers in the announcement of the plans of the marriage of Miss Ruby Wilder Robertson and R. K. Stow of Jacksonville, Florida, which will be an event of Saturday, January 17, taking place at the bride's home in Decatur.

The ceremony will be performed by Dr. R. K. Redwine, pastor of the Jackson Hill Baptist church, in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

Miss Charlotte Robertson, as maid of honor, will be her sister's only attendant. W. T. McCurdy will act as best man.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Stow will go on an extended trip to Miami and other southern Florida points.

Miss Robertson is being feted at a series of social affairs preceding her marriage.

Mrs. J. W. Mozely was hostess on Friday at a tea at the Woman's club in her honor.

Mrs. A. A. Greene entertained at a miscellaneous shower at her home on Euclid avenue on Saturday.

Mrs. W. R. Bell entertained at dinner for Miss Robertson on Sunday.

Mrs. S. B. Hanes will entertain at a bridge-tea on Wednesday at her home on North Moreland avenue, complimenting Miss Robertson.

Nelson Shipp Addresses Club on Prison Reform

"Not sentimentalism but common sense, not academic nonsense, but business economy, not misguided sympathy, but common justice, is back of the prison reform movement in Georgia at this time," said Nelson M. Shipp, associate editor of the Macon Telegraph, in an address before the Atlanta Woman's club on the subject of prison reform Monday afternoon.

Mr. Shipp is a student of the subject and is conceded to be one of the best informed men in the state upon prison conditions here and in other places, having worked out a program of reform that only needs public sentiment behind it, to make it actualized in Georgia as it is in other states.

"What is the purpose of a prison?" asked Mr. Shipp as he opened his remarks, and he answered his question by saying: "The purpose of the prison is to punish the criminal and protect society. But back of every convicted criminal there is a history of misfortune, mental defect, or evil surroundings. How do we know that with these same environments, we might not be just as unfortunate as these violators of principles, who have been found out and caught, and did not have have friends or money to save us? Students in psychology know that it is the eternal lifting up, lighting up of man that keeps him in the right path.

Needed in Georgia.

"The thing needed in Georgia," continued Mr. Shipp, "is to establish the state warden and pardon clerk plan, instead of the present prison commission, for consid the position of your legislators, when they appear before your prison commission and ask for convicts for the camps in their territory. There are good men," said Mr. Shipp, "who are placed in this position, and it is the system that is wrong and not always the office holder. It is the political situation that prevents us from having justice in many cases, and therefore great importance attaches to the system on which state departments are conducted. In many instances the political world reveals a certain blindness to the double mission of the penal system.

Mr. Shipp told of a young man, who was known as a bad boy, but whose mother was extremely ambitious for the lad and had sent him to colleges. Suddenly he grew tired of college and decided to make his way back home by rail, without the means of transportation. He was arrested, placed in prison, along with the worst of criminals, until his trial came. While compelled to be associated with this lowest type of humanity, he formed a resolution that if he was found guilty and sentenced to a long term, that when he was released he would make the worst criminal yet known, but fortunately he was only sentenced to 30 days, then released. That man," said Mr. Shipp, "is a highly intelligent and respected citizen of Georgia. What if he had been sentenced for a long term, or had not friends to fight his cause?"

Mr. Shipp closed his remarks by saying: "It takes a man many years to build a home; but a child will make that home beautiful in a day. It takes years to build an industry but only a second to destroy a child. If Georgia is to reflect the smile of the child and the echo of its joyous laughter, it must not crush but must build up. Its policy in dealing with delinquents must be constructive.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, presided over the meeting and introduced the speaker, paying

GIRLS AND BOYS' CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

Gene Stratton-Porter's Last and Greatest Novel

Only a few days before America's best beloved author met such a tragic death, she mailed to McCall's the concluding chapters of her last and greatest novel—"The Keeper of the Bees"—starting in the February issue.

If it had been given to her to choose her last message to the American public she would have been well content, we believe, to let this great novel stand as her farewell. It is a magnificent study of the perils and temptations of modern life. To a returned soldier—a crippled victim of the Great War—love comes strangely amid the blackness of his despair. Into his ebbing life fate flings his "storm girl," radiant and vivid, bringing him love that is stronger than death—and faith that will not yield to despair.

This is the last full-length novel by Gene Stratton-Porter that can ever appear in any magazine—such a story as only she could have written. Surely you will want to read her last inspiring message to the readers that she loved so much and served so well.

AN OPERATION RECOMMENDED

Avoided by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I cannot give too much praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. My mother gave it to me when I was a girl 14 years old, and since then I have taken it when I feel run down or tired. I took it for three months before my two babies were born for I suffered with my back and had spells as if my heart was affected, and it helped me a lot. The doctors told me at one time that I would have to have an operation. I thought I would try 'Pinkham's,' as I call it, first. In two months I was all right and had no operation. I firmly believe 'Pinkham's' cured me. Every one who saw me after that remarked that I looked so well. I only have to take medicine occasionally, not but I always keep a couple of bottles by me. I recommend it to women who speak to me about their health. I have also used your Sanative Wash and like it very much." — Mrs. E. GOULD, 4000 East Side Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised.

PREACHER-FARMER ONE OF THIRTEEN

Says He Grew Up Knowing Black-Draught Was Reliable Liver Medicine and Still Finds It Good.

Disputanta, Ky.—The Rev. James Harding regularly preaches at four local rural churches here, but finds time personally to manage his farm. "I have lived in Kentucky all my life," he says. "There were thirteen of us children and my mother used home remedies whenever one of us got puny. I remember very well how she used to make Black-Draught tea for us, for colds, biliousness or when we had children's diseases. I grew up knowing Black-Draught was a reliable medicine.

"After I was grown I would suffer with constipation and feel stupid. A few doses of Black-Draught would set me right and I would feel full of 'pep.'

"We gave Black-Draught to our children and my wife took it. We keep it on hand for torpid liver, indigestion, sour taste in the mouth, or excess gas.

"I don't believe a better liver medicine can be found. After using Black-Draught all my life and knowing what a splendid laxative as well as a system-cleanser it is, I am satisfied, and expect to go on using it for years to come. It is mild, easy to take and good for children as well as grown-ups."

Over ten million packages sold a year.

The Atlanta Constitution's Cross Figure Puzzle

First Prize $1,000.00 in Cash

Second Prize, $500.00; Third Prize, $400.00; Fourth, $250.00— ALL CASH

A Grand Total of $2,570 in Cash Prizes .. 30 .. CASH PRIZES

Read The "PROBLEM," The "GENERAL RULES" and "THE PRIZE LIST," Then go to work on the Solution. IT MAY MEAN A VALUABLE CASH PRIZE TO YOU.

Nearly everyone is interested in cross-word puzzles, and working on them for fun and pastime. You can work on The Constitution's cross-figure puzzle for fun and profit. There are 30 cash prizes, ranging from $1,000.00, first prize, $500.00, second prize, $400.00, third prize, etc., on down to $10.00. Someone is going to win these prizes.

Why not you? $1,000.00 is worth an effort. No one has a better chance than you if you get busy and put forth the proper effort.

PROBLEM

Draw three separate chains of circles horizontally (left to right), and three perpendicularly (top to bottom) through the puzzle chart, locating them so as to obtain the greatest difference you can between the sum total of the figures in the circles running horizontally and the sum total of those in the circles running perpendicularly.

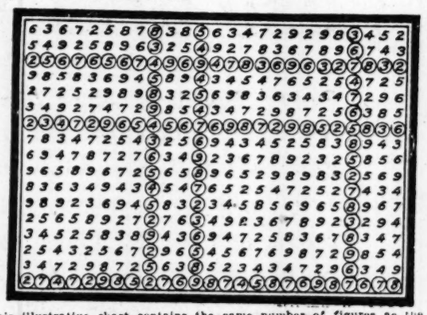

Allow at least two rows, or columns, of figures to intervene between any two chains running either horizontally or perpendicularly. You may allow as many more to intervene as you may find expedient.

The figures in the circles where the horizontal and perpendicular chains cross or come into contact are to be included in the total of either horizontal chains or the perpendicular chains, but not both.

There are nine points of contact, but no figure is to be included but once. If all figures in horizontal chains are included, then none of the contact or crossed figures can be included in the perpendicular total, or vice versa.

You are not required to obtain the greatest possible difference that may exist between the two totals in this cross-figure puzzle. The prizes will be awarded to those submitting respectively the greatest difference without regard to whether any of them is the greatest possible difference or not. The greatest difference you can find, therefore, may win for you the first or some other prize.

The accompanying illustration demonstrates what is meant by a "chain of circles."

This illustrative chart contains the same number of figures as the cross figure puzzle. Note there are three horizontal and three perpendicular chains. The total number of figures in the three former is seventy-five and in the latter fifty-one. Figures of contact (and there are nine of them) can be included but once. If elected to include all in horizontal chains, add the 75 figures in the horizontal chains, and from that total subtract the sum total of 42 figures in the perpendicular. If all the figures in the perpendicular chains are used, then from the sum total of the 66 figures in the horizontal, subtract the sum total of the 51 figures in the perpendicular chains. Use any rows of figures you wish in constructing your horizontal chains and any columns you wish for your perpendicular chains, provided you allow at least two rows or columns of figures to intervene between any two parallel chains. Note there are two columns of figures intervening between the first two perpendicular chains in the illustration. The chains in the illustration were drawn in at random and without regard as to whether better results might not have been obtained by locating them elsewhere in the chart. This illustration, therefore, merely gives a general idea of what is to be done, but does not furnish a clue or key to what rows or columns of figures you can encircle in the puzzle chart to the best advantage. Mistakes in adding figures, or in subtracting the totals, will disqualify your answer.

When you have obtained the best solution you can find, insert in the subscription and solution blank the sum total of the figures in the horizontal chains and directly under this the sum total of the figures in the perpendicular chains and then the difference between the two. Attach this to the chart showing your six chains. This chart must accompany the blank in every instance Otherwise it would not be possible to verify your work.

The best chart submitted in this contest will be reproduced in The Constitution immediately upon the close of the contest, so that all contestants can check their results with it.

A solution once received and recorded cannot be changed or withdrawn.

4. Only one prize will be paid to any person, household, or group of persons working together. When in the judgment of the contest manager, two or more solutions have been copied or worked in collusion, such solutions may be rejected by him and the subscription money refunded.

5. The Constitution is to decide any question which may arise that is not covered by the published rules, and those entering this contest agree to abide by its decisions and accept them as final and conclusive.

6. All solutions must be mailed or delivered to The Constitution office on or before 9:00 P. M., Wednesday, January 21, 1925. Solutions sent by mail bearing postmark of that date will be accepted. This contest extends from Sunday, December 7, 1924, to and including Wednesday, January 21, 1925.

7. In case of ties, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded for less correct solutions; and another puzzle will be submitted to those tied. That is, if two or more people should tie on the best solution, the first two or more prizes will be reserved for them, and they will be rewarded in the order of the standing of their solutions of the second puzzle.

8. In the event of ties for any prize, or prizes, a second puzzle of the same type as this cross figure puzzle will be presented to those tied to solve. However, instead of single figures the numbers will consist of double figures such as 15, 24, 36, etc., and the problem will be to construct a chain of circles across the chart so as to obtain the greatest difference between the sum total of the even and sum total of the odd figures within the circles. If necessary to dispose of further ties, this puzzle will be presented for as many as five additional times under slightly changed conditions and rules, after which, should any ties ensue, each contestant will receive the full value of whatever prize he wins.

9. The contest is open to both old and new subscribers alike. The regular subscription rate of $2.50 for three months, $5.00 for six months, $9.50 for twelve months to the daily and Sunday Constitution will prevail. Daily only subscriptions will not be accepted in this contest. Full amount of subscription must be remitted in every instance. When sent through an agent, no commission can be deducted.

10. A person who is now taking the daily and Sunday Constitution, and paying a carrier or agent by the week or month may send or bring direct to The Constitution a three, six, or twelve months' payment with the solution. Whatever is due such carrier, dealer, or agent must be paid to him, as the remittance sent us should date from the day it is received. The carrier or agent will be notified by The Constitution of such advance payment. Renewals on mail subscriptions will be extended for the length of time paid for from present paid date of expiration. The contestant can have solution credited in his or her name, and paper sent to some other party. Two six-months' subscriptions at $5.00 each are equal to one yearly subscription. One six-months' subscription at $5.00 and two three-months' subscriptions at $2.50 each, total remittance $10.00, are equal to one yearly or two six-months' subscriptions.

CLOSING DATE

The Cross-Figure Puzzle Contest will close at 9:00 P. M., Wednesday, January 21, 1925.

The earlier you send in your solution the longer time you will have to go over your figures and send in another solution if you find you can do better.

Additional charts may be secured at any time by calling at the address below or sending a self-addressed stamped envelope for mailing them. NO SOLUTION CAN BE CHANGED AFTER IT HAS BEEN ONCE REGISTERED.

IMPORTANT FACTS TO REMEMBER

While the amount you pay with the solution of the puzzle does not have any effect on your winning a prize, it does affect the amount you will receive, should you win one of the first nine prizes, as the value of these prizes is determined by what the winner pays. This is explained in the prize list, which you should study carefully before sending in your solution.

Remember that the subscription and solution blank must not be separated from the cross figure chart. The time a solution is received has no bearing upon its winning a prize. Accuracy is what counts. No more than one prize will be awarded to any one person.

If you desire extra puzzles free by mail, be sure to inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope. Address Contest Manager, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

THE PRIZE LIST

Note.—The value of the first nine prizes depends on how much you pay on your subscription with your solution of the puzzle. The amount paid will be applied to Daily and Sunday. Daily only subscription payments will not be accepted in this contest. Tri-Weekly subscriptions not accepted.

"Simon Called Peter."

(Coming to the Atlanta.)

"Simon Called Peter," which comes to the Atlanta theater on Monday, January 19, when it begins an engagement of one week with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, is the dramatization by Jules Eckbert Goodman, of Robert Keable's novel of the same name. He tells the story of Peter, a war chaplain, and Julie, a Red Cross nurse. How the prim young London clergyman surrounded by the influence of the war melts transiently to the extent of soliciting a week-end in a London hotel; how Julie, far wiser, knows she can never thrust the vision of the cross from his heart. If he is all to her, she cannot be all to him. And one may guess she realizes as well that with the instincts of gaiety in her blood they could not be long contented together. But she does send Peter out into the world with a greater understanding of his purpose and a still deeper love for God. There will be many well-known names in the capable cast personally selected by the producer which will include Bettie Wales, Charles Warburton, Andree Rondel, June Dorion and others. Mail orders may be sent in now. The box office sale begins Thursday morning.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

"Isn't Life Wonderful," what a beautiful saying and what a beautiful picture. D. W. Griffith has again produced a picture beyond criticism. It is one of the best love stories ever seen on the screen, the direction is flawless and the production is massive. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, those two famous stars of "America," are seen in the leading roles. These two stars depict the hardships of the Polish refugees to perfection, while the other supporting characters are wonderful. Never has Griffith failed to put the proper touches in a picture and it seems that he has put his whole heart and soul in "Isn't Life Wonderful." The prologue atmosphere of some of the scenes in the picture is produced to the minute detail and Eunice Curry Prescott and J. Herbert sing with a feeling one will never forget. The overture, "The Bohemian Girl," was a musical treat and last night's audience went wild over it.

Barbara LaMarr.

Barbara La Marr made her debut as a full-fledged star in "Sandra," last night at the Metropolitan theater.

Barbara has been seen in many pictures, but never before as an individual star. Her acting has been in conjunction with some other headliners to the cast.

In "Sandra," however, she is given the stellar role and First National announces that this is the first of a series of pictures in which Barbara will be starred.

"Sandra," an adaptation from the novel of that title by Pearl Doles Bell, offers Barbara an ideal chance for the display of her talents. Bert Lytell has the leading male role.

"The Fast Worker."

(At the Rialto.)

When the sapient Mr. Gilbert remarked that a policeman's life is not a happy one, he little dreamed of what unhappiness a man with a ready-made wife and family he never saw before in his whole life is capable of. It remains to Reginald Denny to demonstrate this—and he does it in "The Fast Worker," Universal's Jewel adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's "The Husbands of Edith," which opened yesterday at the Rialto theater.

"The Square Sex" is the Telephone Girl comedy. Pathe News is shown. Whitney Hubner directs the musical program.

FORSYTH PROGRAM FEATURED BY ACT OF HARRY JOLSON

Harry Jolson, operatic blackface comedian extraordinary, saves the bill at the Forsyth theater for the first half of the week.

Jolson—brother of the inimitable Al—has almost as much finesse and repertoire as his famous brother. Jolson sings popular songs in a manner that Atlanta has never heard before and will never hear again, unless Harry comes back next season. But it is doubtful if Harry will return to the Forsyth next year, in vaudeville anyway, for they are building a big musical comedy vehicle for him. And he deserves it.

After taking no less than four encores, the last of which Harry responded to to get the show started again (he had completely stopped it and the orchestra played the vamp of the last act's music for five minutes while Harry was making extemporaneous bows). Harry sang the sextette from "Lucia" in burlesque and grotesque manner. It was seriocomic. And it was a knockout! Jolson has a rich baritone voice and he would be a riot on an all-world program any time. Worth the price of a season ticket alone. He has a good accompanist at the piano.

Jolson works in an "olio" and is next to last place on the five-act program, the "soft" spot. During his act he reads off the names of all the latest popular songs and asks for requests from the audience. He sang nine songs "by popular request" Monday night.

There is little to mention in the remainder of the program, except for Snoozer, the intellectual dog. Snoozer presents an unusual act. He is more than just "nearly human." He knows a lot more than some folks.

The Ruby Trio present a dance act. Jose Saxton and Jack Farrell have the sketch, "The Elopers." Louise Bowers and company, three women and two boys, dance and sing.

Forsyth's orchestra gave a special music program preceding the performances.

LOEW'S PATRONS GET REAL THRILLS IN STELLAR ACT

"Beauty and the Beast" hold forth at Loew's Grand theater this week, and collectively speaking of the former, because Hubert Kinney has brought to Atlanta as attractive a chorus of dancing girls as have been seen here in months. "Teddy," the wrestling bear, is the "beast," and with the assistance of two good comedians and his trainer, he closes the bill and holds the audience for curtain calls.

The Hubert Kinney Revue is an elaborately staged dance offering, which is pepped up by some striking and daring costumes. The five girls who show off an expensive collection of gowns, display in addition to their personal pulchritude some very clever and graceful dance movements. Hubert Kinney is an able lead and carries four of the number through four phases of the Argentine tango in a most creditable manner. Another feature of the act is an accentuated interpretation of the Hawaiian Hula dance, led by one of the chorus, gowned in a striking creation of red and supported by three others in grass costumes, peculiar to Hawaiian dancers.

"Teddy," the wrestling bear, is trained in comedy and has excellent support in the two comedians who appear as the act gets underway. Though you may boast at never having laughed at slap-stick comedy before, you will find laughter is contagious in this case.

Al H. Wilson, comedian, has arranged one of the cleverest lines of comedy since he took to vaudeville and last night he had the audience with him. He "pulled" a few of the old ones, but the old-time genius of the comedian seemed to crop out and his gags took. Wilson's chatter seems extemporaneous, and his natural Irish brogue helped him to several well-earned curtain calls.

The act of Warren and Hayes, a skit with an eccentric dance follows the opening number, The Powers Duo, two European acrobats, sho some very commendable exhibitions of head balancing on perches.

The Tom Mix photoplay, "The Heart Buster," is a thriller.

CLARK W. BOOTH.

'THEIR FIRST BABY' ACCLAIMED 'BEST' BY LYRIC CROWDS

An audience that taxed the capacity of the roomy Lyric theater was plunged into a paroxysm of mirth from the very beginning of "Their First Baby" Monday night. The laughter did not cease, nay, did not even hesitate, for the full duration of the three hilarious acts of the funniest farce comedy the popular dramatic stock company ever has spun off in Atlanta.

It was a play in which Loraine Bernard could wax comic to the uttermost. That will mean everything to regular Lyric patrons but to others may it be explained that the show was a "wow."

The comedy scintillates around the misadventures of a young baby and the near tragedies that result to its parents, its parents' friends and their friends as a result.

Fred Raymond, the daddy, and Edith Luckett, who created the part in the original New York production, was the mother. Loraine Bernard was the maid, a comedy character which she developed with a buffo make-up and accent that made the crowd go wild with laughter every time she spoke, sang, laughed or wept,—and she did much of each. Will Lloyd had a secondary comedy role as the kidnaper-in-chief of the infant which was the "apple" of its father's eye. Jack Holden, Marion White, Gavin Harris, Mabel Griffith and Finley Freeman had important "straight" parts while William Macauley as a henpecked hubby, and Edwin Vail as a widower with four twins, from way down "Avenue A" were a couple of extra screams of laughter. Raymond and Miss Luckett played the frantic parents with a vim that brought down the house time and again.

A "Miss Georgia Doll," called into action at the last minute Sunday when Will Loyd declined to handle a real baby, picked for the occasion, as roughly as the plot and lines demanded the infant be handled, was accepted by the audience with entire approval. Goodness knows, at many moments of that side-splitting comedy everyone was glad that Lloyd had vetoed the real baby idea. As it was, it was the most warmly applauded farce comedy of the season, not excepting "Just Married."

Musical Program.

A beautiful musical program was rendered just prior to the address of the afternoon. J. Douglas Swagerty, director of the Druid Hills Presbyterian choir, delighted the audience with several vocal numbers as follows: "Rolling Down to Rio," by Edward German; "Duna," by Josephine McGill; "The Cares of Yesterday," by John Metcalf, and a delightful composition from Harry Pomar, one of Atlanta's musical artists entitled, "Dream Depths," Mr. Swagerty was accompanied by Mrs. R. M. Forster at the piano.

George Butler, who possesses a rich tenor voice, also rendered a group of lovely selections. Mrs. W. O. Chears, chairman of music for the club, arranged the musical program.

Mrs. Sharp announced the Carolina Folk players, for January 26, under the auspices of the Atlanta Drama league. Other announcements were as follows: The club rummage sale, chairmen, Mrs. J. B. Billups, Mrs. Eva Corrigan and Mrs. E. V. Carter, January 24, 26 and 27. Mrs. Cecil Stockard was accepted into the club by a unanimous vote as a life member.

The following resolutions were adopted by the club: Resolved, That the Atlanta Woman's club heartily indorses legislation for the restricted sale of pistols. (Signed) Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president; Mrs. Norman Sharp, president, Atlanta Woman's club.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF LONNIE KENT WILL FACE COURT

Moultrie, Ga., January 12.—When superior court convenes here January 19 court officials will be faced by the lightest criminal and civil dockets that have confronted them in several years, according to the clerk. The session is expected to last but one week, though it usually requires from two to three weeks to clear the calendar in Colquitt.

Only one important criminal case is scheduled for trial. It is against Arthur Morelle, who is held in jail here in connection with the killing of Lonnie Kent, near Berlin, last November. Morelle will claim self-defense.

COOLIDGE ADDRESSES CONTRACTORS' MEETING

Washington, January 12.—Delegates of the Associated General Contractors of America, opening their annual convention here today, were advised by President Coolidge in a brief address at the white house, that they might serve the public interest by standardizing contract forms and adjusting operations to combat seasonal fluctuations in employment.

Secretary Hoover, who spoke before the convention later, expressed opposition to the undertaking of construction work by governmental authorities without utilization of contractors' services.

"My own belief as an engineer is that construction of public works by contracts makes for national accomplishment," he said.

Considerable waste in industry and litigation, he added, is occasioned by the indefiniteness of present building contract forms.

POSTAL CLERKS UNDER COERCION, SECRETARY SAYS

Washington, January 12. — A charge that the postoffice department is denying employees the benefits of sick leave and the eight-hour law, and is coercing them in other ways, was made today by Thomas F. Flaherty, secretary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, who requested Representative Nolan, republican, California, to ask for an investigation.

In New York, he said, the eight-hour law has been abandoned in some divisions and in Chicago, "constant espionage" is kept, driving the men to speed up "to the limit of human endurance."

"Men active in the recent wage campaign," the statement said, "have been third-degreed and coerced. Several have been dismissed."

He contrasted this with "the action of the department in calling to Washington inspectors and supervisory officials to lobby in vindication of the department's cost ascertainment report."
